

Libertarian Review

July-August 1976—Vol.V, No.4

As We Go Marching By John T. Flynn

THE STATE

America's Emerging Fascist Economy By Charlotte Twight

Toward a Planned Society By Otis L. Graham, Jr.

The dreams of economic planning (often euphemistically called "rationalization") and of social reconstruction are seldom far removed from the forefront of the imagination of numerous American businessmen, intellectuals, politicians, and other social engineers. A recent spate of planning proposals have been pushed center stage in the current ideological debate, and although this is not the place to consider the merits of the current proposals, it is important that we try to place them in their proper historical perspective.

Everyone recognizes that there has been a dramatic change in the nature of the American economy during this century. Almost everyone recognizes that the system that has emerged is not that of the free market. The economics and political science textbooks usually call it a "mixed economy," whatever that might mean. Clearly we must move towards a more meaningful definition, but definitions are possible only after considerable analysis and interpretation. The books under consideration in this review help us to do just that.

Attorney Charlotte Twight faces the problem of definition head on. She looks around for a socioeconomic structure similar to that of the United States, and she finds such a fully developed system (America's being only incipient) in the corporatist states of Italy and Germany in the 1920s and 1930s, viz., fascism. She accepts E.B. Ashton's definition of fascism as "capitalist collectivism": the forms of capitalism (nominal private property, contracts, and markets) but the substance of State control, both direct and indirect.

Twight cites the constitutional basis for the legality of American fascism (the interstate commerce clause, and the preemptive doctrine), and she then goes on to catalog numerous economic interventions, the sum total of which she demonstrates add up to, at the very least, an emergent system of economic fascism. She perceptively sees that control over the economy's money and credit is the necessary and most important command post. She examines the economic consequences of interventions such as the following:

licensing, regulation, and rate making; product control; increasing the power of the executive branch; control over labor and agriculture; import-export and foreign exchange controls; and more.

As useful as the Twight book is—and it is quite useful as far as it goes—I find it almost devoid of social and political context. There is no real sense either of historical perspective or of historical circumstance. There is nothing to give us even the slightest inkling of why the interventions took place. Were they the result of fate, of chance, of design, of perceived need, or of actual need to rationalize dislocations caused by previous interventions? The reader will find no answer here.

Twight, an obvious devotee of the free market, views the emergent controlled economy with sadness. Otis Graham, a disciple of America's foremost exponent of planning, Rexford Tugwell, welcomes the advance of planning. Whereas Twight is strong on economic libertarianism and weak on historical context, Graham is, at the very least, naive on economic theory, but excellent at putting the history of American intervention and planning in historical perspective.

Graham's book is a very important contribution to twentieth century American historiography. He traces the path—an inexorable path as he sees it—of planning from the midst of World War I to the present. The continuity that he uncovers is both an eye-opener and cause for alarm.

Beginning with the War Industries Board during WWI, both the vision and practice of central control and management of the economy caught the imagination of numerous businessmen and intellectuals. The desire for centralized planning of the economy has waxed and waned in business and academic circles during the years since, but there has been a continuity of the planning vision that has remained strong with pivotal intellectuals and business and political decision-makers.

Graham traces the history of American planning from the WIB to the New Deal, where he finds the various experiments in planning—Twight would, I think, more correctly call them experiments in, or "flirtations with," fascism—such as the NRA, AAA, WPA, RFC, et cetera, to be tentative steps in the right direction. Particularly intriguing is Graham's insight concerning the central importance throughout the New Deal of the Natural Resources Planning Bureau. Control over the use of resources, perhaps second only to control of the economy's supply of money and credit, is the key to "successful" planning. Twight's excellent chapter on control of America's agriculture is particularly relevant on this point.

After the fight over the Employment Act of 1946, during which the tough planning teeth were pulled from the bill, conscious efforts at comprehensive planning lapsed. Graham contends that, with few exceptions, central planning lay dormant until LBJ introduced the planning, programing, and budgeting system in the Bureau of the Budget. (Graham refuses to consider macro fiscal and monetary manipulations to be planning in any proper sense of the term.)

The next great leap forward towards planning, a leap that is portrayed in one of the most revealing parts of Graham's book, takes place during the first administration of the Nixon regime. The role in the Nixon schemes of unreconstructed planner Daniel P. Moynihan is particularly interesting. Both Twight and Graham rightly see Nixon's imposition of peacetime price controls as an important precedent that is sure to have widespread ramifications for future planners.

(Continued on page 18)

What's in Libertarian Review This Month

- As We Go Marching by John T. Flynn / America's Emerging Fascist Economy by Charlotte Twight / Toward a Planned Society by Otis L. Graham, Jr., reviewed by Walter E. Grinder 1
- The Third Industrial Revolution by G. Harry Stine, reviewed by Jerry Pournelle . . . 3
- "Where Is Our Intellectual Middle Class?" by Reginald Brettnor 4
- "Introduction to Imaginative Literature" (Part V: So-called Children's Literature) by Jeff Rigenbach 6
- Mind: An Essay on Human Feeling by Susanne K. Langer, reviewed by Regina Hugo 7

- Defending the Undefendable by Walter Block, reviewed by James Dale Davidson . . . 8
- Living With Equals by Jerry Klasman, reviewed by Susan Love Brown 9
- "On View" by David Brudnoy 10
- Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape by Susan Brownmiller, reviewed by Myra Friedman 12
- Free Market Economics by Bettina Bien-Greaves, reviewed by Sheldon Wasserman . . 14
- "Tom Waits" (Music in Review) by Steven Utley 15
- Formation of the State by Lawrence Krader, reviewed by William Danks 16

- The Healing Factor: Vitamin C Against Disease by Irwin Stone, reviewed by Linus Pauling 18

Departments

- An Afterward from Readers, Authors, Reviewers 20
- A Word to Our Readers 2
- Briefly in Review 19
- Cinema in Review 10
- Classified Advertisements 22
- Contributors in This Issue 2
- The Decline 4
- Essay Review 12
- Libertarian Cross-Currents 20
- Literature in Review 6
- Music in Review 15

A Word to Our Readers

● A serious typographical error crept into Neil McCaffrey's May-June installment of "Jazz: The Golden Age." Speaking of Glenn Miller, the copy as printed read: "He was a Force; and and, I fear, for the better." It should have read: "... and not, I fear, for the better." Our apologies to Mr. McCaffrey and to our readers.

● With this issue, Steven Utley joins Libertarian Review as a regular columnist (see page 15). Steven will be keeping his eye (ear?) on the rock-music scene for us. A freelance writer and reviewer, Steven is a rising star in the science fiction firmament. He has reviewed rock for the newspapers, and his first contribution to LR ("Roger McGuinn and Band") appeared last December. Steven lives in Austin, Texas, with his dog, Quilla June.

● having a Summer Special on odds 'n ends left over from the LR Book Service:

American Liberalism and World Politics (2 volumes) by James J. Martin. This is the definitive study of pre-World War II American foreign policy. Regular price: $22.50. Summer Special: only $15.

Les Miserable by Victor Hugo. Regular price: $7.45. Summer Special: only $5. For Those I Loved by Martin Gray. This is an exciting autobiography of a man who survived Hitler's death camps. Regular price: $8.95. Summer Special: only $5.

Send your order (be sure to enclose $.75 to cover postage and handling) directly to Laissez Faire Books Dept. 576, 206 Mercer Street, New York, NY 10012.

● LR readers who want to get in on the ground floor of the Third Industrial Revolution (see page 3) should join/support one or all of the following organizations:

National Space Institute, 1911 North Fort Myer Drive, Suite 408, Arlington, VA 20009. NSI is headed by Dr. Wernher von Braun and works to promote public understanding of and support for space activities. Members receive an interesting monthly newsletter and other publications. Annual dues are $15 (college age and older) and $9 (high school age and younger). Life membership is $100. Dues, memberships, and contributions are tax deductible.

Earth/Space, Inc., 2319 Sierra, Palo Alto, CA 94303. Earth/Space is "dedicated to free space enterprise," and its monthly newsletter (one year, $5; five years, $20) contains much interesting information.

L5 Society, 1620 North Park, Tucson, AZ 85719. L5 is working to promote the development of space colonies of the sort envisioned by Princeton's Professor Gerard K. O'Neill. Members receive a newsletter. Annual dues are $20.

● Now available from Audio-Forum are cassette tape recordings of the recent Paul Harris Tax Haven Seminar. Harris is one of the most respected authorities on tax havens. On five cassettes, he talks about tax havens, what they are, how they function, why they are valuable, and provides a thorough evaluation of various tax havens. Order Tapes 441-445 (5½ hours) for $63.75 directly from Audio-Forum, 901 N. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314.

● Classical music lovers: We are offering at our cost our remaining stock of classical recordings. Check out the list below, we are sure you'll find something you will like—and the price is right! (As usual, please include $.75 for postage and handling and mail payment to LR, 901 N. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314.)

Berlioz, ROMEO ET JULIETTE/$8.90

Beethoven, SYMPHONY NO. 9 IN D MINOR/$6.10

Delius, IN A SUMMER GARDEN/$3.58
Gesualdo, GESUALDO, PRINCE OF MADRIGALISTS/$3.49

Haydn, THREE CONCERTOS/$1.95
Mahler, SYMPHONY NO. 10/$7.46
Mahler, SYMPHONIES NO. 6 & NO. 9/$11.19

Mahler, SYMPHONY NO. 8/$6.10

Schubert, SYMPHONY NO. 9/$3.58

Scriabin, SYMPHONY NO. 3/$3.00

Scriabin, SYMPHONIES NO. 4 & 5/$3.65

Strauss, FOUR LAST SONGS/$3.65

● Things to Come: The September-October Essay Review features R. Bretnor on gun control. In the same issue: James J. Martin on 'Twas a Famous Victory and An American First: John T. Flynn and the America First Committee, and Bruce Bartlett doing in Galbraith's Money: Whence It Came, Where It Went. Also in the works: Larry Niven on The Next Ten Thousand Years, Rob Masters on Ardrey's Hunting Hypothesis, Peter Breggin presiding over The Death of Psychiatry, Susan Love Brown reviewing A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to Equality, Sexual Life Between Blacks and Whites, and Fear of Flying, Roy Childs reacting to Robbins' Answer to Ayn Rand, Bill Danks thinking about Intelligence Can Be Taught, John Hospers contemplating Blanshard's Reason and Belief, Bill McIlhenny on Thinking About Crime and Punishing Criminals, and much, much more to enlighten, outrage, and delight you. ■

Contributors IN THIS ISSUE

Reginald Bretnor has attended about a dozen private and public schools and colleges—without getting a degree. He has written fiction for Harper's, Esquire, and the science fiction magazines, and articles for the Encyclopedia Britannica. His latest book (as editor) is The Craft of Science Fiction, forthcoming from Harper & Row. Susan Love Brown is on the staff of the Campus Studies Institute and is Vice-Chairwoman of the California Libertarian Party. David Brudnoy is a syndicated columnist, TV and radio personality, and freelance. He writes on film and books for various journals. William Danks is a PhD candidate in political science at the University of Hawaii and director of the university's Human Rights Project. James Dale Davidson is Executive Director of the National Taxpayers Union. Myra Friedman is the author of Buried Alive: The Biography of Janis Joplin, which was a National Book Award nominee in 1974. Walter E. Grinder is an LR associate editor and executive director of the Center for Libertarian Studies. Regina Hugo has held myriad jobs, ranging from chicken farming to editing. She lives in Seattle, where she is working on a novel. Linus Pauling, twice a Nobel laureate, is Chairman of the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine. Jerry Pournelle, PhD, is science editor of Galaxy magazine and a leading science fiction writer. His "A Step Farther Out," a column about the frontiers of science, appears monthly in Galaxy. Inferno, Jerry's most recent novel (with Larry Niven), is just out from Pocket Books. Jeff Riggensbach is book critic for the Los Angeles all-news station KFWB. Steven Utley is a freelance writer and reviewer. His fiction has appeared in Galaxy and other magazines. Sheldon Wasserman writes a money and gold column for The Investing Professional. His review of Free Market Economics is reprinted with permission from the Laissez Faire Books Catalog & Review. ■

Subscription Service Form

My Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

☐ ENTER MY NEW SUBSCRIPTION—12 issues, $8. MY PAYMENT IS ENCLOSED.

☐ EXTEND MY PRESENT SUBSCRIPTION—12 issues, $8. MY PAYMENT IS ENCLOSED.

☐ SEND ADDITIONAL COPIES OF THE _____ ISSUE OF LR AT $1.00 each; 5 for $3.75; 10 for $6.00; 50 for $25; 100 for $40. MY PAYMENT IS ENCLOSED.

☐ PLEASE ENTER GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THOSE LISTED BELOW. (1 SUBSCRIPTION, $7.50 FOR 12 ISSUES, 2-25 SUBSCRIPTIONS, $7.00 FOR 12 ISSUES, OVER 25 SUBSCRIPTIONS, $6.00 FOR 12 ISSUES).

SEND GIFT SUBSCRIPTION TO:

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Sign Gift Card " _____ "

SEND GIFT SUBSCRIPTION TO:

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Sign Gift Card " _____ "

SEND GIFT SUBSCRIPTION TO:

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Sign Gift Card " _____ "

SEND GIFT SUBSCRIPTION TO:

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Sign Gift Card " _____ "

Editor

Karl T. Pflock

Publisher

Robert D. Kephart

Associate Editors

Walter E. Grinder

John Hospers

Tibor R. Machan

Ralph Raico

Murray N. Rothbard

Assistant to the Publisher

Janet Fouse

Production

Rhonda Solt

Advertising Manager

Karen Brown

Circulation Director

Randall Rothmen

Libertarian Review is published bimonthly by Libertarian Review, Inc., editorial offices at 901 N. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314. © 1976, Libertarian Review, Inc. All rights reserved.

LR will not be responsible for unsolicited manuscripts. Opinions expressed in bylined articles do not necessarily reflect the views of the editors and publishers of LR.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: 12 issues $8. ADDRESS CHANGE: Write new address, city, state and zip code on plain sheet of paper. Attach mailing label from recent issue of LR, and send to Circulation Dept., Libertarian Review, 6737 Annapolis Rd., P.O. Box 2599, Landover Hills, Md. 20784. Application to mail at second class rates pending in Alexandria, Virginia

The Third Industrial Revolution

By G. Harry Stine

I have never seen a satisfactory study of the influence of wealth on human freedom. On the one hand, no republic has long remained both wealthy and a republic; on the other, whatever the political freedoms, without some measure of material wealth a people's real choices are likely to be highly limited.

The First Industrial Revolution is conventionally dated from the Darby coke oven and the Newcomen and Watt steam engines, beginning somewhere in the eighteenth century and peaking in Europe and America in the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries. By introducing new forms of energy to replace human and animal muscle-power, the First Industrial Revolution made it possible for large masses to have leisure—and therefore real freedom. Prior to that the effort merely to produce enough to eat absorbed too much effort. One might be "free" in the legal sense, but that translated, for most men, into command over very few hours of their lives.

The Second Industrial Revolution (SIR) began early in this century and is not yet complete. It is not as clearly definable as the first, but is generally characterized by "automation," "robotic control," and "feedback." The vacuum tube and the mechanical analogue were tools of the SIR, but it can be argued that without the transistor and the integrated circuit the SIR's effects would not have been so profound as they are.

“Out there it's raining soup, and Stine is telling us to grab a bowl.”

No matter. Between them, the two industrial revolutions have thoroughly and completely transformed both individuals and societies. Prior to the two revolutions it would not have been possible even to contemplate a world in which large masses would be free to: communicate across continents; travel intercontinental distances in hours; dispose of energy equivalent to a dozen slaves and herds of horses; retain teeth past age 40; read at night in good light; keep tropical fish; publish fanzines and newsletters; get fat; go backpacking; eat fresh vegetables in midwinter; taste sweets until tired of them; get drunk and stay that way; avoid at least some of the medical consequences of free love; have a large enough money income to attract the attention of the Internal Revenue Service; read hundreds of books; regularly read dozens of magazines.

The two revolutions have not been without negative consequences. First, they have produced pollution, and have brought us closer to exhausting certain of Earth's resources. Second, they have made it possible for governments to take a thoroughgoing interest in what each of us does. Without great wealth the State could not afford much in the way of agentrie. It could not maintain dossiers, pay informants, keep an army of accountants and investigators and social workers and alienists and lawyers, lawyers, lawyers.

Comes now the Third Industrial Revolution, which just may let us keep the benefits of the first two while providing us with a mechanism of escape from some of their more unpleasant side effects. This is the major premise of G. Harry Stine's important book.

The Third Industrial Revolution (the term is original with Stine) will come about when manufacturing operations are routinely carried out in space. According to Stine, "It is going to change the face of Planet Earth. It will drastically alter our life-styles. It will affect nearly every person on Earth. It holds the promise of improving the quality of life and of increasing the standard of living of those who wish to participate.

"During this revolution we will begin to transform Planet Earth into a garden planet."

SCIENCE & SURVIVAL

This may seem a tall order. Stine sets out to demonstrate that it's not only possible, but inevitable.

He succeeds when discussing physics and technology. In a series of highly readable essays—part of this book was previously published as a set of popular articles in Analog Science Fiction/Science Fact—Stine shows what we may accomplish in space. He describes industrial processes impossible here on Earth. If you happen to know that Stine is not only an engineer, but also a "gadgeteer"—one of those chaps who just can't help trying to turn research drawings into cone clutches, slip joints, turned brass fittings, transistors, and op-amps—you'll have an even greater appreciation of the book.

Stine itches to get out there and start work.

And what a work it could be! O'Neill colonies on which upwards of 50,000 people could live, and which could be started before the end of this century; electronic launch systems to hurl products of lunar mines into orbit; solar furnaces, thin films, biological products; you name it, and out there we can do it.

A single asteroid contains more than enough metal to supply the world for a year and more. There are hundreds of thousands of asteroids; and, yes, we have the technology to move them about the Solar System. We have the technology to spin up mylar films, silver them over, and use the resulting mirror as a source of solar energy for our space refinery.

Moreover, Stine argues, the resulting wealth and increased living space will inevitably give more freedom to those who want it.

Finally, he argues, the Third Industrial Revolution is truly inevitable. "The first billionaire space moguls are now alive." The only real question is who will become fabulously wealthy by sparking off the TIR, and who will merely benefit.

Harry Stine believes that when "it's steam engine time, steam engines will be built." I don't. At the moment Earth certainly has both the technology and spare resources to begin space operations; and Stine shows convincingly that once started on any scale at all, space exploitation will be so profitable that it cannot be stopped. All very well: but the required investments are enormous, and there are counterpressures.

There's the strong movement for zero-growth, which can strangle the Third Industrial Revolution in its cradle. There are political pressures for taxes to make it impossible for anything but a government to undertake space exploitation, and stronger ones for wasting those taxes on salaries for graduates of social science departments and lawyers, lawyers, lawyers...

(Continued on page 18)

An encyclopedic A survival handbook:

QUICK COURSE IN HARD-MONEY INVESTMENTS

And Other Inflation-Survival Secrets

As economic conditions become progressively bleaker, more and more cautious people are returning to the time-honored methods of protecting their assets: gold, silver, rare coins, fine art, and similar "alternative" investments.

Such people know that runaway inflation is a very real possibility. And they also know that economic chaos is bound to be accompanied by social chaos: shortages, violence and civil turmoil.

These far-sighted individuals are taking no chances. They are preparing themselves for both economic survival and physical survival.

How about you? Have you made any preparations to meet this kind of crisis situation? You've probably thought about it, but you've hesitated because of the many subjects involved and their apparent complexity. Surely it would take a lifetime, you may have said, to acquire knowledge of so many different specialties.

Until just a short while ago, that fear may have been justified. But now there's A QUICK COURSE IN HARD-MONEY INVESTMENTS... And Other Inflation Survival Secrets.

A QUICK COURSE is a brief yet comprehensive introduction to precious metals, alternative investments, and personal survival techniques. Prepared by the editors of the "Inflation Survival Letter," America's leading survival publication, A QUICK COURSE contains 17 chapters, each on a different subject, each by an expert in the field.

These authorities answer your questions, provide specific "how-to" information, and guide you step by step through each specialized area. Previously bewildering subjects like gold and silver investment, Swiss banks, foreign trusts and alternate energy source suddenly become crystal-clear. Each chapter is a basic, non-technical introduction to its subject. Yet each is also completely authoritative, accurate and up to date.

A QUICK COURSE is the simplest, briefest introduction to alternative investments and survival techniques now available. If you've considered hedging your assets against inflation or taking the steps necessary to protect yourself against the consequent social upheaval, you can't afford to pass up this important book.

A Preview of A Quick Course.

Here is an outline of all 17 chapters of A QUICK COURSE IN HARD-MONEY INVESTMENTS... And Other Inflation-Survival Secrets.

- 1. An Inflation-Survival Strategy for Everyone. A summary of the inflation problem for the layman. Discusses the probable effects of inflation and government actions, and offers some startling economic predictions.
- 2. How to Invest in Gold, by Rene Baxter. The prospects for gold as an inflation hedge. How and where to buy it, store it, sell it. Everything you need to know.
- 3. How to Invest in Silver, by William F. Rickenbacker and the editors of ISL. Silver as a hedge against inflation—its pros and cons. Loaded with facts.
- 4. Investing in Rare Coins for Profit and Pleasure, by Richard F. Suter. Rare coins have proven to be one of the soundest of all anti-inflation investments. A comprehensive guide to rare coin investment.
- 5. A Swiss Bank Account for You, by Robert Kinsman. Exactly why you need a Swiss bank account and how to set it up. Written by one of the world's leading Swiss bank authorities.
- 6. A Complete Guide to Commodities Futures Trading, by Eugene Jackson. A noted commodities expert leads the reader step by step through the methods, risks, and potential rewards of the fastest speculator's game in town.
- 7. Fine Arts and Antiques: Investments to Enjoy, by Richard Rush. America's best-known authority on art and antique investments shows how the experts profit in this field.
- 8. Foreign Trusts: Not Just for the Wealthy. How to protect your assets from foreign exchange controls and (sometimes) even from taxes.
- 9. A Layman's Guide to Survival Firearms, by Bill Davidson. One of America's best-known writers on outdoor subjects shows why the uncertainties of the future make it essential that you own the correct weapon for personal safety.
- 10. How to Buy Rural Property, by Gary North. Everything you need to know to buy country property for investment, vacation use, or for a future safety haven.
- 11. Ten Best Ways to Hide Your Valuables, by David Krotz. Tips on home hideaways for gems, coins and other valuables.
- 12. Your Guide to Swiss Life Insurance and Annuities. Why U.S. dollar policies are certain losers against inflation, and why Swiss policies are the best alternative.
- 13. How to Prepare for the Next Energy Crisis, by Roy A. Johnson. An expert takes a fresh look at alternative sources of heat, light, electricity, transportation, etc.
- 14. The Best of Interest-Paying Checking Accounts, by Mark Skousen. Amazing but true. Many U.S. banks pay interest on your checking account. Thousands of ISL readers have profited from this important article.
- 15. Where to Earn High Interest and Dividends, by Mark Skousen. A complete description of highly liquid, dividend-bearing investments.
- 16. Mexican Bank Deposits. Earn yields up to 13 percent! How to safely invest your money in Mexican financeras.
- 17. A Complete Survival Directory. Private safe deposit companies... Recommended books and cassette tapes and where to order them by mail... Recommended advisory publications, free catalogs, and other literature... Foreign banks... Storage food companies... Coin dealers, securities brokers, metals and futures brokers, investment advisors and portfolio managers... An indispensable guide that includes names, addresses, prices. Literally hundreds of entries!

Your Unconditional Guarantee.

A QUICK COURSE IN HARD-MONEY INVESTMENTS... And Other Inflation Survival Secrets is not sold in any store. It's available only by mail, and the price is just $9.95 postpaid. It takes the place of a dozen other books, each of which would cost you at least the price of A QUICK COURSE alone!

What's more, A QUICK COURSE comes with this unconditional guarantee: If, after reading it, you find that you're dissatisfied in any way, simply return it to us within three weeks. Every penny of your $9.95 will be promptly refunded.

This may be one of the most important books you will ever read. It is simple, brief, easily understood. When you close the book, you will know every single principle necessary to make intelligent survival decisions for yourself and your family.

But the value of A QUICK COURSE goes well beyond a single reading. For years to come, you'll find yourself referring again and again to this useful, usable encyclopedia.

The way things are going, this is one book that should be in your hands as soon as possible. You can't afford to delay a moment longer. Mail the coupon today!

I want to learn exactly how to best ensure the economic and physical survival of myself and my family. Rush me A QUICK COURSE IN HARD-MONEY INVESTMENTS... And Other Inflation-Survival Secrets. My payment is enclosed. I understand that I may return the book for a full and immediate refund within three weeks after receipt if I'm not completely satisfied.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
437
KEPHART COMMUNICATIONS, INC.
901 North Washington St.
Alexandria, Va. 22314

SA756

The Decline

Where Is Our Intellectual Middle Class?

By Reginald Bretnor

In order to discuss this very important question sensibly and answer it, we must first define what we mean by an "intellectual" middle class. We have become so used to thinking of the middle class in economic terms, and the shifting patterns of the economy have made these terms so culturally meaningless, that most of us seem to have forgotten that at one time, not too many years ago, the words "middle class" enjoyed a rather richer connotation.

When I speak of an "intellectual middle class" here, I am referring to a spectrum of the citizenry basically self-supporting, self-reliant, intellectually alert and independent, and self-determined where their major life decisions are concerned. These are people who belong neither to the manipulated masses nor among those mandarin illuminati whose pretensions to superior wisdom are so largely responsible for the failure of our educational systems to produce much of anything except narrowly trained specialists and more mandarins.

They are people interested enough in the world and its problems to have informed themselves, one way or another, regarding its history and geography, and interested enough in men and our destiny at least to have enquired into the nature and causes of human events. They are people secure enough in their own cultural backgrounds to know how to live their lives and raise their children without "expert" guidance, and solidly enough grounded in their own moralities to be able to make reasonably sound judgments regarding the morality of the men they choose to represent them and of the public policies they wish pursued.

Obviously, membership in such a class need not be synonymous with what we think of as middle class affluence, though at one time the two did tend to go together. However, even in Victorian days many poor people were included—poor teachers, poor librarians and booksellers, intellectually active but impecunious craftsmen and farmers, poverty stricken writers and artists, impoverished clergymen, and (!) even poor doctors. These people helped to form an intellectual middle class that was a cultural, political, and economic mainstay of American life—a class that today has ceased to exist as a major influence. No doubt many individuals still belong to it, but collectively they have little or no clout.

They have been effectively neutralized by the techniques of mass media manipulation, by increasing concentration in the news-entertainment industries (so that fewer and fewer people are in a position to influence more and more), and by the mandarinization of academic life and the stultifying over-specialization of the professions and useful sciences. Worse still, a great many people who should belong to such a class have, through the operation of those same influences, remained intellectual proletarians.

The evidence for the previous existence and influence of the intellectual middle class is clear and uncontrovertible. From the time of the Civil War until Franklin Roosevelt's ascension to the throne, for instance, a period when our population was far smaller and our statistical literacy far lower than today, the country always managed to support twenty to thirty serious national reviews, designed to be read by thinking men and women interested in the affairs of the nation and the world, in the adventure of finding out the past and creating the future, in art and literature and scientific progress. How many of their names come instantly to mind? The old Harper's and Atlantic Monthly, Scribner's, the North American Review, the Bookman, the Dial, Current History, the American Mercury, to mention a few only. They did not hesitate to print discursive essays appealing only to the intellect; they were designed solely for the reader—their advertisers were only allowed to tag along; they needed neither the sex pitch nor raw sensationalism nor tricky eye-catchers on a third-grade level to attract and hold their readers' interest.

Of course, they were not perfect. Nevertheless, their awareness of the problems of their time, considered now, is often astonishing; and this was true, not only of the national reviews, but of many magazines whose scope was regional, like the Far West's Overland Monthly and the original Sunset, for example. I have a dozen copies of the Land of Sunshine, now generally forgotten, published in Los Angeles in the late '90s and early 1900s. Picking one at random, the issue of May 1900, we find a copiously illustrated article on "Painting the First Americans, E.A. Burbank's Indian Portraits," and another entitled "The Story of Cyrus Hawk," about the plight of Sioux Indians on the reservation. Concern for the Indian and his culture is one of the magazine's continuing themes; so is an active interest in Mexican history and customs; so too is an awareness of the natural beauties and resources of the West, and the necessity for preserving them. (Unfortunately for the liberal mythology, neither the Indian nor the Mexican nor conservation really were discovered by followers of Professor Marcuse or Timothy Leary.)

“...not too many years ago, the words 'middle class' enjoyed a rather richer connotation.”

All that is necessary to get a good overall picture of the reading material of Intellectual Middle Class America is to go to a good library and get out a few bound volumes of the national reviews of the period. Then compare them with what's left—and what is left? Harper's and the Atlantic, both very trendy and self-consciously mandarinish in their approaches, each pretty much a Madison Avenue manufacture. If you can tell the text from the advertisements, you're doing well. Yes, we have the New Yorker, so ingrown that its devoted readers hardly seem to exist in the same world as the rest of us, and the latest incarnations of the Saturday Review, and all the academic quarterlies, read only by academics and by happenstance passersby in college libraries.

But to find a general magazine still designed for the reader who enjoys reading, who is interested in many facets of the world past and present, and who wants no advertising interference with his reading—well, where do we turn? We write to Edinburgh and subscribe to Blackwood's Magazine.

Nearly thirty years ago, Clifton Fadiman called attention to the disappearance of the reviews in an extremely perceptive article, "The Decline of Attention" (Saturday Review, 6 August 1949), and he compared them to the mass circulation "slicks," whose intent, he observed, was "to attract the attention without actually engaging it; to entertain rather than challenge; or, to use the editors' quite legitimate phrase, to be 'readable'—that is, to present material which can be read easily and forgotten quickly."

The great reviews were then already gone, but the Big Slicks—the literature of what we can (perhaps a bit unfairly) call the Intellectual Lower Middle Class—were going strong: the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, American, Liberty, and all the rest, including the major women's magazines. Dig into the files. Stack these up against their existing counterparts today. They seem like intellectual giants by comparison.

The general slicks have disappeared (though the Post has been more or less revived, largely as a nostalgia piece). But some of the women's magazines are still going under their old names with new and very different slants. It used to be that idiot hero-worship (the adoration of show-biz VIPs and similar "celebrities") was pretty much confined to retarded females in junior high schools and in the waiting rooms of beauty shops. Today we find it a main stock in trade, not only of the sexational supermarket tabloids, but even of the once-sensible, once-respectable women's magazines. Is the average American housewife or working girl, today so emotionally and sexually deprived that she has to live, vicariously, the presumably exciting life-in-bed of the Kennedy tribe—Jackie and Teddy and now JFK, and by association the late Ari and his offspring, and of Liz and Burton, and of half a hundred dismal rock stars? Obviously, the answer must be yes. Take a good look into the magazines on your local newsstand.

If we are indeed as "liberated" as our liberal left leadership would have us believe, why do so many of us now need such wretched surrogates?

Again, if we are indeed so much better educated and informed than our predecessors, why do we require such a multitude of "experts"—officially sanctified experts with assorted doctorates, and publicly acclaimed experts-through-notoriety, running the gamut from semiresponsible columnists to toally irresponsible celebrities-of-the-moment—to tell us how to run our lives? Why is it almost universally assumed by the editors of today's mass-circulation magazines that their readers are unhappy with their own lives and themselves, that they are thoroughly confused about how to live and act, that they are utterly incapable of deciding their own futures without guidance? Why, on a popular and readily available level, is there nothing else?

The news magazines, Time and Newsweek and U.S. News & World Report do not fill the gap; too frequently, instead of discussing they assert; they are essentially propaganda organs, digesting the news and regurgitating it as approved "facts." Fortune and its kindred business magazines have a distinctly limited perspective because of their economic orientation.

Once more, regard your local newsstand. Pretend you're a Martian. What would you deduce from what you see? Very simply, that the American reading public's interests are focussed either on the crotch or on their other toys: hot rods and hair-dos and tropical fish and other people's sex lives, on dogs and cats and horses, treasure hunting and Avon bottles and sorcery-made-easy—you name it. The focus of a vast majority of magazines is limited to one special interest or one limited perspective; and there really would be nothing wrong with this if it were not just about all there is.

“To put it brutally, we have been intellectually proletarianized.”

The argument has often been proposed that television has made anything more comprehensive or more profound unnecessary because, allegedly, the tube shows the whole world to its viewers, keeping them informed as no one has ever been before. Unfortunately, a few hour of tube-watching can shatter the argument completely. The tube is just more of the same, except that usually it is on an even lower level.

Nor will the other argument—that the publication of serious books has not suffered—hold water. Most really serious books are bought by libraries of one sort or another and by the remnants of what used to be our intellectual middle class, not by the people who need them most; and the literary culture of a country cannot flourish only in institutionalized libraries, only on campuses, only through the mass-merchandising of best-sellers. It requires the freely exercised choice of innumerable intelligent and self-confident individuals; it needs the private libraries they build up, the booksellers they patronize, the publishers—and most especially the small publishers—whom they can keep alive. Here we find a decline paralleling that of the intellectual middle class magazines. How many professional and even academic homes does one find today containing no books at all? How many small publishers—and I refer to small general publishers, not to narrowly specialized houses—can stay in business? How many new and used book shops are there in your community? Consider this: there were more bookstores in California in 1855 than there are today.

To put it brutally, we have been intellectually proletarianized. Most of us have had our confidence in our taste and in the principles by which we live thoroughly shattered by our professional taste-and-trend makers. There is no longer a decided difference between the literary taste, the musical taste, the general cultural levels, or the aspirations of the high-grade (or even low-grade) moron and of most highly capable, high-IQ professional men and women. Except for relatively few individuals, isolated or living in even fewer cultural islands, they watch the same TV programs, read the same immediate-interest publications, drool over pretty much the same porn, and let the same advertising and PR men, and the same academic mandarins, decide their "lifestyles" and their destinies.

And yours and mine. ■

THE RUSSIAN MENACE: CHILD OF F.D.R.

World War II was presented to the American people as a holy war. Unconditional surrender was said to be necessary for lasting peace. Eisenhower wrote of a "crusade" in Europe.

The war was won. Germany was left prostrate, and the Bomb incinerated what was left of Japanese resistance. But as Churchill wrote: "... after all the exertions and sacrifices of hundreds of millions of people and of the victories of the Righteous Cause, we still have not found Peace or Security, and ... we lie in the grip of even worse perils than those we have surmounted."

What went wrong? Benjamin Colby takes a bold look at the Righteous Cause and arrives at disturbing answers. Maintaining popular support throughout World War II involved two necessities, says Mr. Colby: trust in Russia and hatred of Germany. To engender trust in Russia, "the Soviet territorial objectives and political intentions had to be concealed. This was the central and all-pervading deception during the period of actual war. It was accompanied by an unremitting effort to whitewash the Soviet record and create a new Soviet image."

The other necessity was met more easily; even before 1939 Hitler's regime had become odious. But U.S. government propaganda used the German people for its target, not just the Nazi regime, and thus justified Allied atrocities like the mass bombing of civilians. Colby presents shocking evidence that the Allies initiated the bombing of civilians as strategic policy; worse, that Churchill purposely goaded Hitler into bombing London. American cities remained intact throughout the war, says Colby, "but whether the people themselves escaped psychologically unscathed is a disturbing question. Wrapped in the belief of its own righteousness and the myth that Germany started the bombing of cities, America has appeared to have few qualms about the wholesale air war conducted against German civilian populations."

Mr. Colby unfolds the propaganda prelude to war ... the secret war in the Atlantic ... the great Atlantic Charter deception ... the tight lid on Russian war aims ... the coverups of Soviet atrocities ... the secrecy surrounding Teheran ... the lies about Yalta. He reveals the role of Hollywood and the Writers War Board in creating hatred of Germans and enthusiasm for our alliance with Communists.

The deceptions began, the author shows, when the American people were told that their survival—or at least England's—depended on U.S. entry into the war. He marshals impressive evidence, however, that "whatever Hitler's ambitions, conquering Britain was not one of them, much less attacking the United States. That the nation could be brought to war by belief in such an imaginary peril is testimony of the war-making powers of the President, who can not only create propaganda for war but, more important, create situations which make war inevitable."

'Twas a Famous Victory is revisionism that raises questions long overdue. Explosive in its implications, it packs sobering lessons for a new generation of Americans—and for some of their parents.

THE FALSEHOODS EMPLOYED TO WIN THE WAR: THEY LOST THE PEACE

- FDR preaches neutrality, but Harry the Hop tells Churchill we'll fight
- The Atlantic Charter as official screen for hiding Soviet aims
- FDR asks Soviet ambassador for help in whitewashing the Communist persecution of religion
- FDR's friends admit he lied us into war
- All the news that fits the tint: how the New York Times, Time, and most of the press treated the Katyn massacre
- Hollywood's Red clique
- FDR scores critics of aid to Russia as "bonus patriots ... noisy traitors—betrayers of America, betrayers of Christianity itself—would-be dictators"
- White House protection of Communists in key posts
- Churchill continues to urge the bombing of civilian populations removed from military targets. His relative silence on the subject after the war

- Stalin refuses to acknowledge U.S. Lend-Lease
- Sir Robert Vansittart: England's fount of hate. His disciples in America
- American scientist suggests that German stock be diluted by "outbreeding." Joseph Pulitzer calls for the execution of 1.5 million Germans
- Soviet atrocities: the great coverup
- Allies refuse to support the anti-Hitler underground
- Luce an anti-Communist? Life's special 116-page edition—devoted entirely to gilding the Soviets
- FCC pressures radio stations with anti-Communist broadcasters
- Teheran and Yalta: what the people were told—and what really happened
- FDR signs millions of conquered Germans into Soviet slavery
- How to sell "the people's paradise" to skeptical Americans
- The Morgenthau Plan: vindictiveness as national policy
- The truth about "precision" bombing

SAVE $7.95

CONSERVATIVE BOOK CLUB 165 Huguenot Street, New Rochelle, New York 10801

Please send FREE 'Twas a Famous Victory by Benjamin Colby and accept my membership in the Conservative Book Club—the only book club expressly for political conservatives. I agree to buy 3 books from among the more than 150 to be offered in the next 15 months, after which I may resign at any time. I will be offered books on politics, investing, social issues, religion, economics, conservative ideas, Communism, history, etc. Membership entitles me to a free subscription to the Club Bulletin, which brims with news of interest to conservatives. I am eligible to buy Club books at discounts of 20% to 89% plus shipping. If I want the monthly Selection I do nothing; it will come automatically about one month later. If I don't want the Selection, or I prefer one of the Alternates, I merely inform you on the handy form always provided. I'll be offered a new Selection every 4 weeks—13 times a year.

LR-103

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY/STATE _____

ZIP _____

☐ I don't care to join the Club but I enclose $7.95 for 'Twas a Famous Victory. Please send postpaid. 30-day return privilege.

Introduction to Imaginative Literature

By Jeff Rigenbach

PART IV: SO-CALLED CHILDREN'S LITERATURE

Does my title betray a defensive attitude, perhaps even a bit of ill temper? It should. For the more extensive my own investigations of so-called children's literature becomes, the more I feel a kind of intellectual outrage at those who have promoted such a concept. It is one which, I am convinced, has denied many a serious writer the adult audience he deserved and has denied uncouth serious readers the pleasure those writers' works might have afforded them. I must count myself among the latter number, by the way—among those who believed some books to be “for children” and so avoided reading those books themselves. And the pleasures I have found since I began reading “children's literature” in exactly the same way and for exactly the same reasons I have always read “literature”—those pleasures have served too often to remind me of what pleasures I had denied myself in earlier times.

“...novelists of genius are denied recognition because their characters are animals.”

Succinctly put, there are at least three different sorts of things printed up and sold as children's literature: there are stories (and I'm going to limit myself to fiction in this discussion, on the grounds, among others, that there is very little true poetry for children—just a lot of narrative verse) whose characters are animals, natural or mythological, or whose worlds are Faery-like, or whose events are magical or some of the above or all of the above; there are stories put together by professional educators, psychologists, and sociologists according to their (usually statistical) assessment of how children respond to various pedagogical stimuli and according to their opinions as to what values ought to be thereby inculcated in children (and these works—the bulk of the fiction offered to small children in State schools—are no more literature than political cartoons are fine art); and there are works of literary art that present the feeling-world of a child—a world less complex than an adult's but no less meaningful and no less beautiful, because it is produced by a mind fully as fertile in invention and fully as facile in symbolic transformation as any adult's.

I hope it is obvious that stories about animals and fairyland and magic aren't necessarily or even usually children's ter or Hope Mirreles' Lud-in-the-Mist? (These last two are only recently out of print in inexpensive paperback editions from Ballantine Books, and are well worth reading). Still, novelists of genius are denied recognition because their characters are animals. And I will break my own rule about translations to mention one such unfortunate case, that of the German writer Felix Salten and his novel, Bambi. Thanks in large part to Walt Disney, this fine work has been paraded before a large segment of the public in adulterated and incompetently bastardized form. Bambi is not a faintly nauseating gambol among fawns and grasses; it is an existentialist fable—a fable of the region in which the existentialist vision is fading into the Byronic conception of the world as hard, cruel and nobly, dramatically doomed. Salten is writing about the world also inhabited by Jack London and Ayn Rand (in her gloomier works, like We the Living). And he is writing about it in a terse, clear, clearly poetic prose not unlike Hemingway's—this is true both in Whittaker Chambers' fine translation and (based on my halting perusal of the original) in the German as well. But he is writing about animals, and this has somehow consigned his work to the children's room of the library. Of course, children do tend to like stories about animals, fairyland, and magic; the reason, I think, is that such stories are frequently simple and thus more comprehensible to children than the average tale. This is not to say, however, that they are deficient in either beauty or meaning for adult readers.

“The chief victim in our own language of the stories-about-animals-are-stories-for-children school of criticism is Kenneth Grahame.”

While I am at the business of breaking my taboo against translations, I want to mention the work of Antoine de St. Exupery and Hans Christian Andersen. The former's best known work, The Little Prince (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, $1.25, paperback), is a haunting, sad, exquisite formulation of the child's conception of adult character types and the child's often halting discrimination between the real and imaginary. Andersen is the author of two of the best short stories I've ever read: “The Fir Tree” and “The Nightingale”—at least, I hold this view of the translations I read (Andersen's Fairy Tales, translated by Lucas and Paull, Grosset and Dunlap, $5.95). And while I'm speaking of fairy tales, let me not fail to mention Oscar Wilde, whose “The Happy Prince” is one of the most nearly perfect works of fictional and artistic style ever produced in English and one of the shrillest defenses of Christian altruism outside of C.S. Lewis.

The chief victim in our own language of stories-about-animals-are-stories-for-children school of criticism is Kenneth Grahame. Grahame was a belletrist in the purest sense of that word—a deliberate writer of beautiful prose. And in his sensibility he was very close to the decadent, aesthetic consciousness of the Yellow '90s (he contributed essays to the era's most notorious periodical, The Yellow Book). Yet because he chose to write of reluctant dragons and of animals (a rat, a mole, a toad, a badger) who speak and act like fin de siècle Englishmen, he has been remembered as a children's writer. Of course, Grahame wrote The Wind in the Willows originally for his children—wrote it for them in the sense that he composed for them the main plot, the Victorian fable of Toad who was addicted to fast motor cars and had to be recalled by his friends to a life of temperance. This is the heart of The Wind in the Willows; it is justly famous for the richness of its humor, and it is popular among children because of the simplicity (and simple-mindedness) of its moral perspective. But for Grahame and for all those children who skip over it only to become the adults who keep the book in print because of it, the heart of The Wind in the Willows is the chapters dropped into Toad's narrative from time to time as melliferous interruptions, as poetic relief—“Dulce Domum,” “Wayfarers All,” “The Piper at the Gates of Dawn.” If there are prose poems, and I've said there are, these are some of the most accomplished in our language—the kind of orgiastic word revelry you might expect in Dylan Thomas or Mervyn Peake or the George Meredith of The Shaving of Shagpat, but not in a “children's writer.”

Two of Grahame's lesser but still very atmospheric productions, The Golden Age and Dream Days, have recently been reissued, complete with the original Maxfield Parrish illustrations. I confess these old book illustrations together with the drawings of the late Victorian period (the work of Aubrey Beardsley and the Alice illustrations of Sir John Tenniel are representative of what I mean), are my favorite pictorial artworks—they are colorful and romantic, but outrageously stylized and individualized, so that the best of their makers—Arthur Rackham, Kai Nielsen, Maxfield Parrish—are instantly recognizable. Their work has recently been collected and published in a number of competing editions. The work of such later exemplars of their art as Mervyn Peake, Frank R. Pape, and Rockwell Kent, has lamentably, not yet become so newly popular. Two contemporary illustrators of genius are Leonard Lubin (whose new edition of Lewis Carroll's The Pig-Tale has recently been published by Little, Brown and Company, $4.95) and Edward Gorey, whose Amphigorey, an omnibus collection of fifteen picture books (some of them novels) with illustrative text, has been recently brought out (G.P. Putnam's, $12.95).

A survey a few years ago showed that a number of leading literary intellectuals would, if forced to choose only 50 books with which to live out the rest of their lives, include in the 50 a one-volume edition of Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass by Lewis Carroll. I'd include it in my own 50, though it's difficult to explain why. Taken as a continuous narrative, the two form a unified whole, presenting a coherent child-perspective on the adult world. But the peculiarly keen pleasure its admirers take in Alice is not of a purely aesthetic sort. It is a more general admiring enthusiasm and elation at the chance to commune a few hours with a man of great wit and not a little erudition, who was able to weave an intricately patterned whimsical story out of scraps of philosophy, mathematics, politics, physics, literature, and an overriding sense of the extent to which the absurd and humorous are only special cases of the logically faulty. (The edition of Alice that guides the reader through all of these scraps in footnotes nearly as enjoyable as the text is Martin Gardner's The Annotated Alice, Clarkson Potter, $12.95.) I have been laughing at some of the Alice jokes for more than a decade; I've been relishing its polished epigrammatic style for at least that long; and I don't ever plan to stop marvelling at either. The book's biggest enthusiasts, interestingly, are philosophers, mathematicians, scientists, and literary intellectuals; its biggest detractors are children, most of whom find it annoyingly enigmatic or incomprehensible. And it is doubtless significant that Walt Disney's Alice, the most “faithful” of his feature-length animated adaptations of “children's literature,” was his least successful commercially.

“Bambi is not a faintly nauseating gambol among fawns and grasses; it is an existentialist fable...”

There are, of course, many other noteworthy works of English literary art that have been stigmatized by the label children's literature; it has been my purpose here to name only a few of the more outstanding. If you enjoy the Victorian manner in fiction, I highly recommend Louisa May Alcott's famous trilogy of novels, Little Women, Little Men, and Jo's Boys. Also typical of the best in Victorian children's fiction is Mary Louisa Molesworth's The Cuckoo Clock (E.P. Dutton, $3.95). More recent works of note include A.A. Milne's Winnie the Pooh and The House at Pooh Corner, P.L. Travers' Mary Poppins books, Lucretia P. Hale's The Peterkin Papers (Houghton, Mifflin, $5.95), Rudyard Kipling's first Jungle Book (again, nothing like Walt Disney) and C.S. Lewis' Chronicles of Narnia, particularly volume six (which may be read first), The Magician's Nephew (Macmillan, $1.25, paperback). Next time: the essay, and a change of title for this series. ■

Mind: An Essay on Human Feeling

PHILOSOPHY

By Susanne K. Langer

"The act form is most obvious in overt performances. . . . But when it is found throughout all organisms, something momentous happens to the whole panorama of biological facts, from the chemistry of protoplasm to the psychology of man: they are seen to be of one piece, no matter how far apart in its vast structure."

Thus does Susanne Langer elucidate a central concept of her two-volume masterwork, Mind: An Essay on Human Feeling, and simultaneously summarize her primary goal in writing it. To place all life into a context which leads naturally to its highest and most complex manifestation: human mentality, or mind. To steer between the Scylla of mechanistic reductionism and the Charybdis of vitalism without suc-painstaking thoroughness in grounding her speculations in empiric evidence wherever possible. These are wedded to an even rarer philosophical virtue—as anyone who has read Feeling and Form or Philosophy in a New Key can testify—lucid and graceful writing. And beyond these qualities lies yet another, more elusive but equally important: Langer's balance of an exact mind with a keen sensibility never violates either my logical faculties or my introspective awareness. There are few psychologists of whom this can be said.

A third volume is projected, to extend Langer's new concepts to the problems of ethics and epistemology. But volumes one and two can stand as a self-contained unit, a superb achievement on their own.

Mind: And Essay on Human Feeling is crucial reading for those seriously interested in psychology, biology, ethics, epistemology, aesthetics, the social sciences, or anyone concerned about the reintegration of our increasingly fractured intellectual community. Social and ethical philosophers, who so often introduce cherished concepts like justice and morality in medias res, without showing any interest in the organic/psychological substrate of human nature, will especially benefit from Langer's example. My own view of the phenomena of life and consciousness has been immeasurably enriched, as well as clarified, by the experience. Reviewed by Regina Hugo / Johns Hopkins University Press, 1970 & 1974 / 2 vols., pb, $3.95 ea.

“The range of research integrated into 'Mind' is breathtaking...”

cumbing to either. To develop new concepts that can unify biology and psychology into one integrated field of study, which in turn will fit into the framework of the material universe revealed by modern physics and chemistry. To provide a philosophical groundwork for the study of man. Langer demonstrates that what is blocking the development of psychology and the social sciences is just this lack of a philosophical basis.

In attempting such formidable tasks, the intrepid philosopher initially finds her way littered by piles of metaphysical chestnuts, which have kept most previous thinkers even from seeing this path as an alternative. These chestnuts have labels: the mind-body problem; reason versus emotion; the question of the origin of life; the "instinct" problem; the subject-object dichotomy; the paradoxes of evolution. Yet Langer, not by fiat, but by careful, systematic sweeping, manages to clear her path of all of them. This alone is worth the price of admission.

But there is much more. Structurally, Mind is itself a superlative philosophical organism, a tour de force of significant form. The growth of the argument, step by step, has the integration and inevitability of works of art, or of biological organisms. Langer begins by explaining her root concept—feeling. She goes on to demonstrate how the problem of the nature of consciousness disappears naturally, without entailing a separate metaphysical substance, if it is viewed as a psychical phase of physiological processes above a certain threshold of intensity.

As soon as feeling is regarded as a phase of physiological process instead of a product of it, a new entity metaphysically different from it, the paradox of the physical and psychical disappears; for the thesis I hope to substantiate here is that the entire psychological field—including human conception, responsible action, rationality, knowledge—is a vast and branching development of feeling.

Langer continues by creating a framework of concepts to embrace the entire range of biological phenomena—from the cell to Beethoven. She offers ample substantiation for her ambitious claims. Of especial interest is her detailed tracing of the "great shift" from animal to human mentality, which makes up volume two. She manages to do this without underestimating either animals or man—a formidable accomplishment.

The range of research integrated into Mind is breathtaking—including extensive materials from aesthetics, biochemistry, genetic biology, ethology, anthropology, and psychology. Langer is one of a painfully rare breed of philosopher, combining two qualities that seldom inhabit the same mind: bold originality in the generation of new concepts and

THERE'S MORE TO FREEDOM THAN SLOGANS

Everybody claims to be in favor of "freedom." Yet how many people really understand what it's all about? Consider the businessman who's all for free competition . . . unless his competition is named IBM or is Japanese. Or the mayor who wants plentiful transportation . . . but outlaws jitneys. Or the military leader who wants to defend freedom . . . using conscripted labor. Or the citizen who's all for free speech and press . . . so long as the material isn't "obscene." Each wants freedom for the things he considers important, but at the expense of somebody else's freedom.

At REASON Magazine, we believe in freedom for everyone. With Herbert Spencer and John Stuart Mill, we believe a person should be free to take any action, so long as it does not interfere with the liberty of anyone else. We call this point of view libertarianism. It is unabashedly individualistic, capitalistic, and (we think) reasonable. Moreover, this voluntaristic, free market approach points the way toward solutions to many of the problems created by the unbridled growth of Big Brother statism—like war, taxation, the energy crisis, and inflation.

Each month REASON explores the implications and applications of the libertarian point of view.

Recent issues have included such articles as:

- Petroleum, Politics, and Prices
- What to Do About Taxes
- Piracy on the California Coast
- The Seabed Power Struggle
- The Life and Death of New York
- Compulsory Medicine: Past, Present, and Beyond
- Victimless Crimes: No Concern of the State
- Bureaucratic Conspiracy and the Energy Crisis
- A Civil Libertarian Looks at the SEC
- Sense and Nonsense About Monopoly
- Deregulating Trucking
- The Airport Crisis and How to Solve It
- Government Controls and Urban Development

In addition to thought-provoking articles, REASON features exclusive interviews with people worth knowing—people such as Daniel Ellsberg, psycho-surgery foe Peter Breggin, Nobel Prize-winning economist F.A. Hayek, CIA critic Victor Marchetti, financial advisor Harry Browne, psychologist Nathaniel Branden, and science fiction writer Poul Anderson.

REASON has been endorsed by such people as Edith Efron, Milton Friedman, and Thomas S. Szasz. Join them in reading one of America's most exciting and thought-provoking magazines. Enter your subscription today.

REASON, Box 6151, Santa Barbara, CA 93111

Please enter my subscription to REASON for the following term:

- ☐ One year, $12.00 (save $2.50 off single copy rates)
- ☐ Two years, $22.00 (save $7.00)
- ☐ Three years, $30.00 (save $13.50)

I enclose a check for $_____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

(Outside U.S. add $1.50 per year)

Defending the Undefendable

LIBERTARIANISM

By Walter Block

Many years ago Bernard Shaw wrote to John Barrymore with a description of the difference between a technician and a true artist. Shaw's conclusion: not much. The difference between a work of art and a plodding presentation is small indeed. It's comprised of those things that seem unimportant to the technician and would be important only to the artist. Yet everyone whose notice we care about recognizes the defects of the final product. Without the attention to the unimportant what is important becomes unimportant.

- This lecture, which arose from Shaw's impressions of Hollywood, came irresistibly to mind as I was reading Walter Block's Defending the Undefendable. I say "irresistibly" because I am warmly disposed toward both the author and his thesis. Having some familiarity with the plan of the book as it was exposed by Block's essays in the Libertarian Forum over the past several years, I was looking forward to some exciting reading. And I was hoping that the book could be one that I might recommend without reservation. But I was disappointed.

Defending the Undefendable is a work of unrealized potential. The editing is sloppy. And the quality of the writing varies from chapter to chapter. Many good arguments, and indeed the book itself, founder over a simple misconception: Block is misusing the word hero. The pimp, prostitute, scab, slumlord, libeler, the person who yells "fire!" in a crowded theatre, the miser, the drug addict, the inheritor, and many others may indeed sometimes be "heroes." But not always. Often they are merely the low-life bums we always thought they were. Block's attempt to convince us otherwise sometimes seems to be mere sophistry, as in the case of the person who yells "fire!" in a crowded theatre. At the very best, it is semantic overkill to term such a person a hero. At worst, it ignores the plain meaning of one of the English tongue's oldest words. For 600 years hero has meant the same thing to Englishmen as the Greek equivalent meant in Homer's time. The hero was a man of superhuman strength or ability who was favored by the gods. The hero became famous on account of his great and noble deeds. In that sense, the hero was like a god. He was worshipped. Yet, no one to my knowledge has ever cited an example of a person who shouted "fire!" in a crowded theatre who was ever venerated for the deed locally or generally. Certainly, Block has given us no such example. He seems to be telling us, rather, that the "fire shouter" is misunderstood. Witness this passage: "What of the rights of the sadists who enjoy yelling 'fire!' in a crowded theatre, and then enjoy watching the crowd tear itself to pieces in the resultant mad rush for the exit? What of the masochists who relish the thought of having 'fire!' yelled at them while in the confines of a crowded theatre with the same mad but 'exhilarating' crush at the door?" These sadomasochists, panting for a seat on the aisle, seem to me to represent more a species of social pathology than of heroism.

The damage done to Defending the Undefendable by the silly and pointless reiteration of a claim to heroism for each species of rogue is large. If I may judge by my own reaction (as a reader who is predisposed to accept the notion that many of society's scapegoats perform useful services), then it may be imagined that those less in tune with the fundamental libertarian perspective of the author would be even more thoroughly alienated. And that is bad, because Block does have many uncanny economic insights into the value of such common social types as "the dishonest cop," "the prostitute," "the pimp," and "the drug pusher."

Block's essay on the slanderer and the libeler was eye-opening to me. He argues convincingly that one's "reputation" that is damaged by slander and libel is nothing to which one has rightful title in the first instance. It is indeed an interesting notion, though one that flies in the face of every system of law of which I have any knowledge. (As I am not a legal scholar, that does not mean very much, but I should nevertheless be interested in a further development of this slander and libel argument by someone who does have a firm grounding in the history of the common and natural law theories.) In the stateless societies of which I have knowledge, libel and slander have generally been treated as very serious offenses. This may be a reason that was analyzed by Gordon Tullock in "Economics of Lying" (in Toward a Mathematics of Politics). Tullock argues that the existence of reputations serves as an important inhibitor to fraud. The individuals with good reputations have an incentive to avoid fraud, as Adam Smith noted, because this increases the profitability of return business. If slander and libel are encouraged in society, as Block suggests, would this not weaken the market disciplines that protect us from fraud? I ask this question not to disagree with Block's conclusions, to which I am disposed, but to point out an area where a richer and fuller development of his thesis is wanting. He says that reputations might be better protected without libel laws. But his argument is too scanty, or so it seems to me, to convince many persons who would be inclined to give the matter careful thought.

“In spite of
...rather large flaws
...Defending the Undefendable’
...is a book worth reading.”

This criticism is not to suggest that Defending the Undefendable is weakly argued throughout. It is not. Rather, the argument is uneven, as indeed is the prose style. The first section, which deals with sexual rogues, the prostitute, the pimp and the male chauvinist pig, is rather well argued. Many persons, of course, would be ready to believe that prostitutes provide useful services. To that extent, much of Block's competent argument here seems rather obvious. The section on the pimp, being less obvious, is more interesting. The treatment of the male chauvinist pig I found most interesting of all. Block really does make a strong case (excepting that he does not seem to understand in this instance also the difference between a hero and a person engaging in permissible behavior).

In the medical section the argument about the drug pusher is convincing. The argument that the drug addict is admirable is something else again. This chapter strains Block's reasoning to the limit.

The section on free speech is perhaps the most interesting in the book. The arguments here are interesting but again flawed not only by the author's mechanical insistence that each "undefendable" is a hero but by his uneven prose style.

Block's chapter on the nongovernment counterfeiter contains an excellent exposition of the imputation of costs from inflation. I recommend it on that account, but not for his argument that the nongovernment counterfeiter is a hero. Block deals all too cavalierly with the fact that most private counterfeiters are detected and that the victims of the private counterfeiters (as opposed to the victims of government counterfeiting) normally absorb all of the loss when the counterfeit is noticed.

The chapter on the inheritor seemed to me to be entirely beside the point. A good editor might well have excluded it from the collection, as it tells us nothing that we don't already know, namely that most individuals will warm to a gift.

The last 100 pages of the book deal rather more conventionally—from a libertarian perspective—with the economic roles of entrepreneurs in various occupations: slumlord, ghetto merchant, speculator, importer, middleman, profiteer, strip miner, waste-maker, fat-capitalist-pig employer, scab, rate buster, and employer of child labor. These are persons who normally suffer the unjust condemnation of society because of prevalent anticapitalist fallacies. And it is when the argument reaches this point that one wishes, or so I wished, that Block had not spent a good deal of his credibility attempting to establish that the drug addict and the sadomasochists in the crowded theatre and the counterfeiter, even the inheritor, were somehow heroic. If he had not, his cogent arguments here might have been much more persuasive.

In spite of the rather large flaws in the execution of Defending the Undefendable, it is a book worth reading. The cartoons, by Rodrigues, are often funny. And Block, when he is at his best, is both entertaining and suggestive. What he is not, however is consistently attentive to detail, nor is he very ambitious in enriching his rich thesis with examples and anecdotes. If he had attended better to the art of writing and spared us the silly insistence on making all of society's rogues into heroes, then his very important thesis might well have become a very important book. Reviewed by James Dale Davidson / Fleet Press, 1976 / $9.95

Three taped speeches by one of the most important and controversial figures on the "New Left."

KARL HESS

takes you inside politics — from right to left.

From establishment Republican to New Left anarchist. From leading conservative ideologue to tax rebel.

Such was the remarkable political odyssey of Karl Hess.

In the course of his journey, Hess turned out numerous articles and books that have been a major force in creating and publicizing the libertarian movement. "The Death of Politics" in Playboy, for example, and "An Open Letter to Barry Goldwater" in Ramparts.

If you're intrigued by Karl Hess' ideas and his political metamorphosis, you'll want to hear him speak. Now, three major addresses by Hess are available on cassette tapes—exclusively from AUDIO-FORUM.

On these tapes, Hess proves to be even more eloquent and hard-hitting than he is on paper. His probing analyses and devastating wit give you a first-hand, "behind-the-scenes" look at politics and society—unlike any you've heard before.

When Karl Hess reports on what goes on in right- and left-wing circles, he speaks with the authority of a true insider. Hess was a founding editor of National Review. Barry Goldwater's chief speechwriter in the 1964 presidential campaign, and the holder of a top post with the Republican National Committee. Yet only a few years later, he was to find himself involved with SDS, the Black Panthers, the antiwar movement, tax resistance, and various alternative projects for achieving social change at the neighborhood level.

Yet Hess maintains that he did not undergo a dramatic "conversion," but simply a logical development. "I still believe in the same things I've always believed in," he said recently. Here's your chance to find out what Karl Hess is really like. Order one, two or all three of these fascinating tapes.

What Happened to Conservatism? Hess traces his development from conservative to New Left libertarian. His incisive and critical discussion covers a broad range of issues, including the economy, the role of the corporation, the concept of an "American destiny," military defense, and labor unions. Speaking before a largely conservative audience in Washington, Hess alternately shocked and delighted his listeners. This on-the-spot recording captures all the intellectual excitement of the occasion, and includes a lively question-and-answer session. Tape 319 (58 min.) $9.95

The Psychology of the Ruling Class A perceptive analysis of power and those who wield it. Hess discusses the psychological traits which distinguish the "power elite" from the rest of us. He provides some startling new evidence to support the old dictum that "power corrupts absolutely." Recorded at the University of Maryland's "Who Rules America?" conference. In the course of the question-and-answer session, Hess presents his opinions on current issues and political figures in the news. Tape 422 (53 min.) $9.95

Libertarian Advocate Dinner We are saddened, Karl Hess believes, with a tyranny of the inept. He delivers a blistering attack on Rockefeller, Kissinger, Reagan, and assorted Government agencies. Also included on this tape are short speeches by Murray Rothbard, Peter Breggin, E. Scott Royce, and Chuck Morgan. Hess is introduced by Alan Bock, director and founder of the Libertarian Advocate. Tape 420 (107 min.) $12.50

All tapes unconditionally guaranteed. Rush order form today!

Send me the Karl Hess tapes I've checked below. I understand that if I'm not entirely satisfied, I may return the tape or tapes purchased within three weeks for a prompt refund.

- ☐ All three Karl Hess tapes at a 12% discount, $28.50
☐ #319 "WHAT HAPPENED TO CONSERVATISM?" $9.95
☐ #422 "PSYCHOLOGY OF THE RULING CLASS" $9.95
☐ #420 "LIBERTARIAN ADVOCATE DINNER" $12.50

AF 135

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

☐ Enclosed is my payment ☐ BankAmericard ☐ Master Charge ☐ Charge my credit card. ☐ American Express Card Number _____ Date Exp. _____

Signature _____

AUDIO-FORUM 901 N. Washington St./Suite 200
Alexandria, Va. 22314

Living With Equals PSYCHOLOGY

By Jerry Klasman

Jerry Klasman's Living With Equals (subtitled An Individualist's Guide to Emotional and Romantic Happiness) constitutes a step forward in extending the concept of individual liberty to thousands of people—people who are not libertarians and who could not care less about the political and economic rhetoric of freedom, but who are interested in ideas that have some bearing on their personal problems... and especially on their romantic problems.

Living With Equals appeals to the self-interest of its audience by setting forth a comprehensible view of romantic love. It stresses the importance of psychological autonomy as a guiding factor in a successful and happy relationship. And, early in the game, Klasman makes it clear: "Sovereignty or slavery. You can't have it both ways."

The trouble with most romantic relationships today is that they are generally based on The Myth—the myth of the happy-ever-after marriage, the myth of emotional and romantic security, the myth that one characteristics of their own, and he gives constructive ways to deal with them.

Perhaps the most interesting part of Living With Equals is the chapter entitled, "Monopolies: Coercive and Natural." No, Klasman has not turned from love to economics, but has employed an economic analogy to describe two kinds of exclusive romantic relationships—one in which two people remain exclusive because of choice (natural), and one in which two people remain exclusive because of obligation (coercive).

This will surely be the most controversial issue raised in Living With Equals, as there are some people who would argue that an obligation to be sexually faithful does not constitute a breach of sovereignty. But Klasman's arguments in favor of natural romantic monopolies rather than coercive ones, as he defines them, are extremely cogent and worthy of serious consideration.

Finally, Klasman tells us that living with equals is "the emotional freedom to give everything to your lover and the relationship without being concerned that the gift will be used in an attempt to restrict your freedom."

It will be books such as Living With Equals that will finally lead the way to a common understanding of what individual freedom entails. This book exposes—without the rhetoric of heavier works—the advantages of being autonomous, of being sovereign in your own life. Psychological laissez faire, for many people, must necessarily precede political laissez faire. Unless the spirit of individuality is a deeply felt and deeply held personal conviction, the implementation of human “Sovereignty or slavery.

You can't have it both ways.”

liberty in the political spectrum is likely to falter.

The achievement of human liberty rests more on human emotions than many libertarians like to admit. The fact that the way to people's minds is through their hearts may seem unfortunate, but it is often the case. And where this is so, it will be books like Living With Equals that strike the first blows for liberty. Reviewed by Susan Love Brown / Delacorte, 1976 / $6.95 lifestyle preordained by society is appropriate for all. These myths have their origin in authoritarian attitudes that most people accept unquestioningly—attitudes of psychological control and ownership of other people.

Klasman cuts through The Myth with clarity: "Equality in romantic relationships requires a meshing of sovereignties comparable to the meshing of gears in a machine. The teeth on each of two gears mesh and transmit energy that makes the machine move. Similarly, the values of two people mesh and make a relationship move... Living with equals requires living with differences, accepting of the realities of your lover's life even when they don't match yours. And of one reality you can always be sure: You and your lover are not identical."

Klasman explains the nature of values and emotions—how they function in our individual lives and how they come into play in our romantic lives. He also talks about differences—the kind that make a relationship grow, and the kind that bring a relationship to an end. "Respecting your lover's sovereignty is the ONLY way to be sure that the relationship is built on voluntarism and freedom of choice rather than on the abdication of sovereignty, on ownership."

Part of learning about individual sovereignty is learning about the nature of jealousy, to which Klasman devotes an entire chapter. Klasman views jealousy as "the ownership trip... the ne plus ultra of authoritarianism." According to Klasman, jealousy is "the emotional response to the loss, or threat of loss, of emotional property." He is careful to differentiate jealousy from envy and insecurity, emotions with Silver has displayed a strong performance over the last few weeks. We are still bullish on silver. Bags of silver coins are limited in number. We believe that the demand for silver coins will accelerate to the point that bags will reflect a $500.00 premium over and above their melt value. In our opinion, we feel that now is the time to purchase bags of silver.

SILVER

GOLD

"We have been reasonably accurate in our predictions concerning the price rise of silver. We now feel that gold is close to the bottom and will soon begin to run up in price. The international flood of paper money which alternately loses value in one country after another must result in numerous international financial interests converting paper into metal. This will be bullish for gold, and we feel a price rise is imminent."

— BUD REED

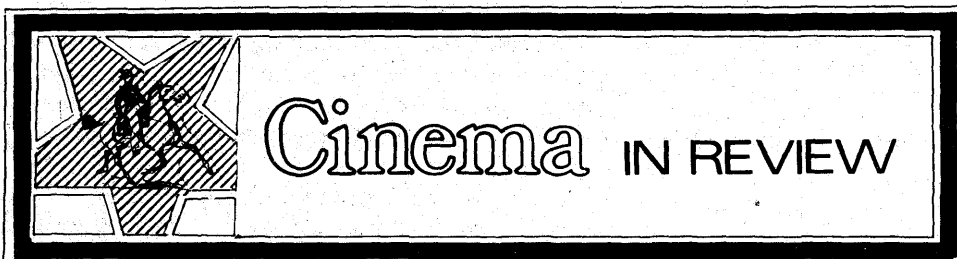

We are coin brokers and we have the low premium bullion gold coins. The Kruggerands, Austrian and Hungarian 100-Coronas, Mexican 50, 20 and 10-Peso gold coins, Austrian 20-Coronas, 4-Ducat and 1-Ducat British Sovereigns and Colombian 4-Peso gold pieces. We guarantee quoted prices, safe delivery and authenticity of every coin we sell.

Please phone us at our new Toll Free number.

BRAMBLE COINS

OAKLEY R. BRAMBLE — BUD REED
1604 MICHIGAN NATIONAL TOWER
LANSING, MICHIGAN 48933
1-800-248-5952

Michigan residents please call 1-517-484-3198

Cinema IN REVIEW

On View By David Brudnoy

O MARLON

Is there a more American movie genre than the western? Is not the western movie the Celluloid synecdoche of the American character? Well, sure, and the western is in trouble, as John Simon writes in a perceptive piece in New York (31 May 1976), in heap big trouble, pod'ner.

Not that it's all a shame. Not with such stalwart white hats as John Wayne vamping on memories of John Wayne past, in True Grit and the sequel to that parodic delight, Rooster Cogburn . . . (and the Lady). Not with last year's triumphant comedy, Hearts of the West, goofing on the West's West and Hollywood's West and Hollywood's Hollywood and the real Hollywood all in one mighty stroke. Ours is the age of the put-down and the throw-away, the sick joke wedded to the shade of camp, the "Aside from that, Mrs. Lincoln, how'd ya like the play?" embedded in a permanent "what do you mean 'we,' white man?" Give a little thanks that the West retains, in this fetid atmosphere of our national consciousness, a hefty dose of its original attraction, such that even the send-ups, the Blazing Saddles, are reverent in their satire, respectful of just so much of what they gaily slash away at.

What, then to make of The Missouri Breaks, the latest "important" western, the long awaited marriage of the awesome talents of Jack Nicholson—who is everywhere these days in all the very best movies—and Marlon Brando, who has spread physically until his corpus resembles his ego? What to make of a movie that is at once a demystification of the West, a hymn to the West, and a vile sneer at the West (this as much Brando's doing as that of anyone else connected to the venture)?

In his New York piece, which, unfortunately, I read just before sitting down to write this, John Simon flawlessly dissects the undoing of the western flick, in reference to Missouri Breaks; and if research is copping from more than one source, plagiarism is copping from one source only, so I'd best let the philosophizing about the western go, with humble advice to the reader to look up Simon's article and but one chunk of quotation from a piece I can't better:

"Hailed by various Bicentennial hacks as the great American myth or great American art form, it [the western] may prove to be the great American embarrassment. For a long time it could thrive on shooting up Indians, until we recognized our national guilt, and shooting up Indians, at least as a heroic accomplishment, became taboo. Which left outlaws. You could still shoot them up and look good. But that began to give a funny image of the Old West: nothing but varmints shooting decent folk and lawmen shooting varmints, and in between a lot of frightened people gumming up the fire-works. Besides, after the millionth variation on the archetypal plot, it starts to pall on everyone except fanatics and simpletons—though these may never be in short supply, thus insuring every more farfetched, adulterated, and desperate westerns a ghoulish sort of immortality."

45 Million People Exposed to Libertarian Ideas!

Forty-five million—that's a realistic estimate of the number of people who have heard, seen, or read about Roger MacBride and the Libertarian Party since the start of our presidential campaign.

Not bad for the first seven months. And it's only the beginning! The most important months are still ahead. By Election Day, Roger and his running mate, Dave Bergland, will have traveled to 45 states and more than 200 cities and towns.

No question about it: Americans are fed up with government. They're ready for the libertarian alternative. Again and again in their discussions with voters around the country, Roger and Dave have found that people understand and sympathize with what we're saying. In fact, the public's readiness to embrace libertarianism has surprised even the most optimistic LP organizers.

Our time has come. This year, as never before, libertarian ideas can make a real impact. We now have a chance to initiate a fundamental change in the direction of society—away from statism and toward individual liberty.

The key to that redirection is the Libertarian Party and the MacBride for President campaign.

Why? Because the LP is the only institution actively spreading libertarian ideas on a mass basis. And because nothing has the power to reach and sway so many Americans so effectively as a presidential campaign.

Yet we have a tremendous advantage over all other parties and candidates: we are saying something different, something vitally important, something that needs to be said.

The result? The media are talking about us, and people everywhere are listening.

Everyone's talking about us.

Already, Roger and Dave have appeared on 40 TV shows, more than 100 radio programs, and have been written up in dozens of syndicated columns and wire service reports.

Here are just a few recent examples:

"1976 may be the ideal year for the young, brave, and idealistic Libertarian Party to put forth a presidential candidate. . . . [MacBride's] views are like fresh air—almost like straight oxygen—and he has been winning converts from the liberal and conservative camps at a surprising rate."

—THE NATIONAL OBSERVER

"The party has come a long way toward receiving national prominence and odds are that the nation has not heard the last from Roger MacBride, the Libertarian Party, and their campaign to roll back big government and guarantee individual freedom in America once more."

—HUMAN EVENTS

"Roger MacBride's Libertarian Party may become the new wisdom of those seeking to turn the older parties into pathways that would have made sense to the Thomas Jefferson who believed that the mark of good government is one that governs least."

—JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

But press coverage is only one part of our strategy. Here are some other accomplishments of the campaign, as this ad went to press:

- Petition drives are underway to get the LP's presidential ticket on the ballot across the country. Prospects look good for ballot status in as many as 35 states.
- A major advertising campaign has begun. It includes a series of 30 and 60 second radio and TV commercials, print ads, and direct-mail appeals to doctors, gun owners, "S-1" opponents, and other groups.
- We've founded the Young Libertarian Alliance—a network of LP affiliates on campuses. A YLA campus organizing manual has been published, and recruitment ads have been run in more than 150 college newspapers.
- The LP is now established in all 50 states. As a result, the MacBride campaign will be provided with essential grassroots organization and support.

What you can do to help.

But to accomplish all this, we need money. We categorically refuse to accept tax funds—libertarian principles permit us no other decision. That means the success of this campaign depends upon voluntary contributions from people like you.

If you've been wondering what one single action you can take to help create a libertarian society, ask yourself this question:

How else but with a presidential campaign could basic, undiluted libertarian ideas reach 45 million people in only seven months?

Please help us reach another 45 million. Clip out the coupon below and mail it with your contribution. Today.

Yes, I want to help bring the libertarian alternative to another 45 million Americans.

☐ Here's my contribution:

☐ $10 ☐ $25 ☐ $50 ☐ $100 ☐ _____

☐ Send me a copy of Roger MacBride's new book, The Libertarian Challenge: A New Dawn for America. Enclosed is $1.25.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

MacBride for President Committee
1516 P Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20005

Paid for by MacBride for President Committee, Robert H. Meier, Chairman.

A COPY OF OUR REPORT IS ON FILE WITH THE FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION AND IS AVAILABLE FOR PURCHASE FROM THE FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, DC.

“O Marlon, what a crock!”

Well, you get the point. And then along comes The Missouri Breaks, and then you realize that the makers of this outrageous, engaging, infuriating, goofy film might just as well have saved themselves the trouble. At least so long as they intended that Marlon Brando function as its linchpin. Brando, from all accounts, simply did what he damn well pleased during the film's shooting, and whatever intent there may at the start have been, to say something coherent, albeit something coherently black, about the West, went out the window every time Marlon Brando hauled his massive bulk in front of the camera.

Maybe it's just revenge, Brando the Injun-lover, Brando the rummy gumming up the 1973 Oscarfest with his little gag, coming back to stink up a western that had vast potential, to befoul the atmosphere with his presence on screen, as in 1973 he had used the Academy's award to him of its precious Oscar as the occasion on which to dispatch a semi-Indian lass named Sasheen Littlefeather to reject his award for him because of Oscar's immediately apparent nexus to the woe-plight of the Original Americans, as we are today instructed to call the Indians.

“...the makers of this outraging, engaging, infuriating, goofy film might just as well have saved themselves the trouble.”

The Missouri Breaks has no Indians in it, just two chiefs: Nicholson, who shine gloriously as an outlaw leader pushing his luck, and Brando, as a "regulator," a hired gun, a (we in due course realize) maniacal killer, employed on the side more or less, of the law, to kill the hors thieves in his own fashion, which happens

(Continued on page 1)

POLITICIANS AND BUREAUCRATS CAME TO WASHINGTON TO DO GOOD, (...and, they have done very well.)

It is supposed to be bad manners to question the motives of public servants. So we won't doubt that government employees, including politicians, are absolutely sincere in working for the public interest.

And we don't doubt that they should be paid for what they do.

But there are limits to what society can afford to pay government employees. Those limits have been passed. For example:

- According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the average Government employee in Washington, D.C., earns about $17,000 per year. The average employee of private business earns only a little more than $10,000 per year.

- The average employee of the Federal Government gets 50% more paid time off than the person working for private business.

- Government employees work shorter hours and have greater job security than persons in private enterprise.

- Federal employees can retire with full pension at age 55—a decade sooner than the typical employee in private enterprise.

A study by the General Accounting Office confirms that government employees get paid more for doing less. For example, claims processors working for the government handle 2,500 claims per year. Those working for private companies process more than twice as many—an average of 5,700 claims per year. In addition, the government processors earn $21,600 while those working for private industry average about only $15,000.

Few private employers can afford to match the high pay government offers, and in attempting to try some have gone broke. The majority who remain in business often do so at low profit rates—returning less to investors than is yielded by government bonds. The result is a lack of capital in productive enterprise and this causes high unemployment.

The situation clearly should be corrected, for the benefit of everyone in society including government employees. But instead of getting better, it's getting worse. Government employees got a 5% raise this past October. They will get another raise this year—it's automatic.

By the time they reach retirement, most government employees are earning much more than members of the public who pay their salaries.

After retirement, the gap between government employees and the rest of the public becomes startlingly large. The Federal Pension system is set up so that retired bureaucrats actually profit from inflation. When the cost of living rises 3% their pensions are adjusted by 4%. After a few years of retirement, many former government employees receive more than when they were working. In fact, many will get more in retirement benefits than the average person earns in his entire working life. This is due to a quirk in the Federal Pension Law—the so-called "1% add on." Former member of Congress, Hastings Keith, calculated that his own pension went up 9% more than the cost of living in just 2½ years of retirement. If increases continue at that rate, Mr. Keith will be getting more than $17,000 per month by the end of his life expectancy.

When the benefits of working for government become too great, everyone in society suffers. Even government workers. Inflationary deficit spending raises the cost of living for everybody. The higher taxes and lower profits in private life mean less production of goods and services, which government employees want to consume.

The result is a vicious downward spiral, which threatens our entire economy. While government pay and pensions skyrocket, the taxpayers, who pay the bills are getting poorer. Real earnings of working Americans went down for the second straight year in 1975. Small wonder.

Former chief actuary for the Social Security Administration, Robert Myers, calculated that the "1% add on" alone could cost taxpayers as much as $400 billion dollars. Since there are only about 60 million actual taxpayers,—your share would be about $6,500.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

As we see it, you have 3 choices:

- 1) You could quit what you're doing and run to get a government job.
- 2) You could do nothing and wait to have another $6,500 in taxes squeezed from your income.
- 3) Or, you could speak up.

If you want to stop the runaway growth of government pay and pension benefits, now is the time to say so.

It only costs you 13¢—the price of a stamp. That's a good investment, just in terms of the higher taxes it might save you from paying. But it's more than that. By filling out the coupon at the bottom of this ad, or sending a letter of your own directly to your representative in Washington, you'll be adding your name to the list of those testifying for fiscal integrity by government. Either way, it's well worth 13 cents to let it be known that you oppose national bankruptcy and the human misery it would bring.

Once you've voiced your opposition to continued fiscal irresponsibility, get your friends to do the same. The politicians in Washington are slow to learn. With them, it's volume that counts. Each name is a possible vote. The more names, the more votes. Make yours count.

HOW CAN WE AFFORD TO RUN THIS AD?

We can't. It's so expensive that we took a risk in running it. But we thought the issue was important enough to warrant sticking our necks out. And, we thought, given the importance of the issue, that you'd be willing to help.

We hope you'll send a membership contribution along with the coupon so that we can place more ads like this in the papers. The more people we get to oppose fiscal irresponsibility, the greater the chance of stopping it. Your membership will help us get more people involved.

It only costs $15 to become a member of the National Taxpayers Union. We'd like to have you with us.

National Taxpayers Union
325 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20003

Yes, I agree. Now is the time to reduce government spending.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

☐ I'd like to make a contribution to help. Enclosed is a check.

☐ I'd like to join the National Taxpayers Union. Enclosed is my $15 membership fee.

The National Taxpayers Union is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of citizens dedicated to stopping the waste of our tax money.

Your contribution will be used to finance further research into government waste and to help publicize it.

Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape

SOCIOLOGY

By Susanne Brownmiller

THERE IS A WIDELY KNOWN story about two men who greet each other on the street in a small town in Poland. "Why have you not returned the pot I lent you?" one says to the other. "I did not borrow your pot," the other replies. "Besides, it was broken when you lent it to me and, besides, I have already returned it to you intact."

That marvelous little anecdote, quoted from a book called The Open and Closed Mind by Milton Rokeach, tells the sum and substance of the psychological system behind Susan Brownmiller's Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape. The system is absurdist, making all roads lead to Rome and closing all roads to anywhere else. It is a system of belief that is fixed and fanatic and built on some astounding fictions.

It is Squeaky Fromme linking the redwood trees to her try at Gerald Ford.

Much ballyhoo has accompanied the publication of Against Our Will. An all-systems-go publicity campaign has been mounted on the part of Brownmiller's publisher followed by the synchronized predictable response of her true-believer followers. Joining the chorus, unfortunately, have been some otherwise intelligent people who've suspended their usual good judgment, slipping their doubts in softly among much louder words of praise. Of course, there are deadline problems and hasty readings. There are other factors as well, by which I mean overwhelming pressure and, on the part of male reviewers, what I suspect is the disquieting discomfort of a most complex sense of guilt. They are, after all, being told that while they are not quite rapists, they are responsible for rape's existence, and maybe they think they really are. Indeed, there is some foundation for guilt (though not that one); it is utterly disproportionate to the reality.

I speak as a woman who is anything but hostile to liberation, both sexual and economic. But I am inclined to see ambiguities in the hearts of men and women, which clearly prevent me from an alliance with those for whom ambiguities quite simply do not exist. I feel it important to state this first. That is where I stand. And rape, needless to say, is an abomination upon this earth, as is the revolting idea that a woman cannot be raped against her will.

Susan Brownmiller has a Myrmidon theory which comes at the end of a chapter titled "The Police-Blotter Rapist" (supposed to describe the genuine article, though it doesn't). The Myrmidons of Achilles did his bidding and functioned "in anonymity as effective agents of terror." Brownmiller then draws one parallel: "Police-blotter rapists in a very real sense perform a Myrmidon function for all men in our society. . . . That some men rape provides a sufficient threat to keep all women in a constant state of intimidation, forever conscious of the knowledge that the biological tool must be held in awe for it may turn to weapon with a sudden swiftness born of harmful intent. Myrmidons to the cause of male dominance, police-blotter rapists have performed their duty well. . . . Rather than society's aberrants . . . men who commit rape have served in effect as front-line masculine shock-troops, terrorist guerrillas in the longest sustained battle the world has ever known."

I have heard excuses for such stuff, implicit or stated quite openly on just about every page of this book: She got carried away, stunned by the horror of the material she unearthed. This defense presumes that Susan Brownmiller set out with clear-eyed objectivity. The other defense is more to the point: Brownmiller is a polemicist and was bound to omit and distort information that failed to suit her purpose. But Against Our Will has not been presented to the public as a polemical work at all. It has been presented as a history, as an accurate story of rape through time, as a correct revelation of its meaning and the ramifications thereof. These include a supposedly factual account of biblical law, the portrait of the rapist himself, the thinking of criminologists and the work of Sigmund Freud along with psychoanalysis in general. What she has stated on these things has been accepted as valid, and even reviewers who have been somewhat critical of her ideological bias have been brought to their knees by what they applaud as scholarship. Against Our Will is not the result of scholarship. Rather it is the result of inadequate, shoddy research and/or a manipulation of material that comes awfully close to deceit.

“This book has been taken seriously, not because it is good but because it exploits a mood of guilt, of fear, of sexual divisiveness.”

I do not say this lightly. Nor would I say it in any case if I believed for a minute that what truth there is in the book—and naturally there is some—was either sufficient or placed in an enlightened context that pointed the way toward much-needed progress, toward the diminishing of that sexual war which is the very foundation of inequality.

“Anyone who has been led to believe they have the straight goods from ‘Against Our Will’ should read...or reread ‘The Boston Strangler’ and then compare it to what Brownmiller has extrapolated....”

Brownmiller tells us of the first prehistoric rape. The second, she is sure was “indubitably planned” though it remains a bit unclear if it was that one, or the third, or the fifth, or the twentieth that was also a gang rape to boot. The theme is set. Rape forced the formation of the human family. Rape, from the beginning and throughout time is the fundamental act of man. So reductionist is Brownmiller's vision that rape to her is apparently the only motif in history.

Thus, in her account of Hebraic ways “Thou shalt not rape” was missing from the Ten Commandments. Actually, she is wrong since the Hebrew word for adultery is tinaf, a generic term for a group of acts, one of which is rape. But errors—and that is a small one—don't seem to matter to Susan Brownmiller. Like a bloodhound, she will not give up until she has extracted from the Bible all the messages she wants. One is the story of Potiphar's wife who cried rape and was thought a liar. For along with that legend, it is Sigmund Freud and Helene Deutsch who share the responsibility for all this talk of false accusation and never mind the centuries between. But what of, for example, the famous Renaissance incident at Loudun when the Curé-Grandier was burned at the stake because of the nun, Jeanne Des Anges, the victim, not of the curé, but of the sexual hysteria of an imagined possession? What of similar incidents that raged through the Middle Ages—as did rape in a time that the historian G. Rattray Taylor described as resembling “one vast insane asylum”?

L.R. Essay Review

Rape is more common in times of social disorder, violence and war. Brownmiller describes rape in war as "a familiar act with a familiar excuse;" "uprisings, riots, revolutions . . . all have provided an outlet and . . . even an ideological excuse for men to practice rape on women"; "war provides men with a tacit license to rape. . . ." The "prerequisites" of rape are "access and opportunity." By which it should be inferred that men can't wait to get out there and risk their lives and live in filth and see their friends killed and be forced to kill others because, after all, compensation awaits them—the glorious chance to rape.

Brownmiller herself has promoted the idea that her conception of rape as the primary feature in the subjugation of women is more or less original; that it could not have been initiated before today's feminist movement and certainly no man could have dwelt on it extensively as crucial to the male-female struggle.

That is patently false. It was elaborated on at tremendous length in the essay "Masculine and Feminine: Some Biological and Cultural Aspects" written in 1944 by the Freudian analyst Gregory Zilboorg who, moreover, drew upon views expressed by one Lester F. Ward in 1888. (The Zilboorg paper appeared originally in Psychiatry 7 [1944]. A slightly abridged version can also be found in a Pelican paperback, Psychoanalysis and Women edited by Jean Baker Miller.) The similarities make me uneasy. They are also extremely ironic in view of Brownmiller's ill-conceived remarks about Freudians.

The Zilboorg essay, though covering some of the same ground, gives no reinforcement of any sort to the thesis of Against Our Will. Whether Zilboorg was right or wrong, his speculations were a thoughtful attempt to correct what he felt was a serious cultural lag on the part of psychoanalysis. He viewed woman as initially the ruling sex (like the female in the animal kingdom), not only equally powerful, but superior because she could conceive and create and because the male was merely a fertilizer who, after he preformed that function, could get lost for all she cared. By the process of natural selection, she developed the male into a very strong creature—and then whammo. Zilboorg would sound as silly as Susan Brownmiller (who could really know what occurred back then?) were it not for his ultimate point that it is man's envy of woman, not to mention his terrible fear of her, that bears on the hostility relating to the development of the social order, which he thought profoundly unjust.

“‘Against Our Will’ is not the result of scholarship.... it is the result of inadequate, shoddy research and/or manipulation of material that comes awfully close to deceit.”

But it would take a quantum leap from Zilboorg's concept of envy (borne out by innumerable observations: anthropological, clinical, mythological) to the portrait of the rapist Brownmiller presents: "An unextraordinary violent-prone fellow." That is the stupidest contradiction to begin with. It is also pulled up from the flimsiest ground: Statistics she likes and a bunch of "decrees" about the character of the rapist as he is viewed by criminologists and psychiatrists, followed by more decrees about the character of the rapist as Susan Brownmiller declares it.

If Brownmiller had wanted to know what rapists were actually like, she would have gone to the prisons and talked to those jailed for the crime. She would have gone to the treatment centers of those prisons and spoken with those who deal with rapists. She, at least, would have tried to interpret correctly the most substantive material in the works she refers to. Anyone who has been led to believe they have gotten the straight goods from Against Our Will should read or reread The Boston Strangler and then compare it to what Brownmiller has extrapolated from Gerold Frank's fine book.

What Brownmiller is determined to prove—through statistics that are not very comprehensive (they amount to one of her drowning jobs)—is an enormous prevalence of gang rape. "Male bonding" is clearly her bete noir. Group rape also strikes her as vivid evidence. It is also critical to her theory of the "male ideology of rape" (italics mine), which she sees as vividly evident in the group attack. Thus it is important to her that group attack be demonstrated as a huge phenomenon. But the true extent of gang rape is questionable. The statistics she has marshalled are not conclusive. Surely it is feasible that a group attack is easier to report simply because it is easier to prove. Immunity can be offered to one guy if he will just tell on the others, and I shudder to think of the proof in the internal condition of a woman who has suffered a gang assault. My own recent check with the very sophisticated Sex Crimes Analysis Unit of New York City, by the way, uncovered a gang rape figure of a strikingly low 10 percent of reported rapes.

“So reductionist is Brownmiller's vision that rape to her is apparently the only motif in history.”

Brownmiller is aware that the ghetto breeds crime. She refers to the "subculture of violence," a theory developed by the renowned criminologist Marvin Wolfgang. But her oversimplifications are outrageous, a means of pushing Wolfgang's theories to coincide with hers.

The point is that the ghetto is not the villain to Brownmiller. It most certainly is not family disintegration, notorious as a ghetto phenomenon and notorious as a contributor to pathology. The villain is the male culture and its offspring, some loony entity she calls "the heroic rapist." There is an element of truth in her chapter about this creation; but the truth is far outweighed by the quantity of absolute nonsense. "Hero" is the surprising word," she says, "that men employ when they speak of Jack the Ripper." She then cites three examples, which leaves an awfully large number of men in the world and also leaves hanging the question: What did she do, take a poll?

This book has been taken seriously, not because it is good but because it exploits a mood of guilt, of fear, of sexual divisiveness. My concern is its chilling aspects and its ugly implications revealed so glaringly in Brownmiller's account of the case of Emmett Till, the 14-year-old black boy from Chicago who, in 1955, was murdered in Mississippi for whistling at the white woman Carolyn Bryant. It was wrong, she makes clear, that he was killed and that his murderers were acquitted. But as for Emmett Till's whistle? It was "no small tweet of hubba-hubba or melodious approval for a well-turned ankle. . . . It was a deliberate insult just short of physical assault, a last reminder to Carolyn Bryant that this black boy, Till, had in mind to possess her." On the following pages, she speaks of the years it took her to "understand the insult implicit in Emmett Till's whistle, the depersonalized challenge of 'I can have you' with or without the racial aspect. Today a sexual remark on the street causes within me a fleeting but murderous rage." Need I say more?

“The villain is the male culture and its offspring, some loony entity she calls 'the heroic rapist.'”

Well maybe only this. There is a section in this book in which Brownmiller calls for karate training from childhood. She describes her own training program in that and jujitsu and how she gained a "recognition that age thirty-eight is not the most propitious time in life to begin to learn how to kick and hit and break a stranglehold, and a new and totally surprising awareness of my body's potential to inflict real damage. I learned I had natural weapons that I didn't know I possessed, like elbows and knees. I learned how to kick backward as well as forward." And this corker: "I learned how to fight dirty, and I learned that I loved it."

Brownmiller can smile sweetly on talk shows. She can chat away about her noble ideals and shake her head sadly about talk of violence and voice her disapproval—to which I say just this: Who is kidding whom?

I am reminded of the words of Karl Meninger in the dedication to Man Against Himself. I offer it here as a contrast to everything that is in Against Our Will: "To those who would use intelligence in the battle against death—to strengthen the will to live against the wish to die, and to replace with love the blind compulsion to give hostage to hatred as the price of living." ©1975 by the Washington Post. Reviewed by Myra Friedman / Simon & Schuster, 1975 / $10.95

“Brownmiller is a polemicist and was bound to omit and distort information that failed to suit her purpose.”

Free Market Economics: Syllabus & Reader By Bettina Bien-Greaves

ECONOMICS/EDUCATION

No one would deny the importance of teaching our country's youth sound economic principles. Yet very little material has been available which is suitable for high school students. Happily now, a study outline, or syllabus, has been prepared by Bettina Bien-Greaves for just this purpose. Mrs. Greaves is eminently qualified for this task, having studied for 20 years with Ludwig von Mises.

The Syllabus, comprising 240 pages, is divided into three sections: (1) Basics, (2) Economic Principles, and (3) Historical and Political Aspects. These sections are subdivided into units, each one dealing with a major subject area. The units contain suggested activities, explanatory text, a list of significant terms used, which are defined in a glossary and recommended readings.

This syllabus is a well-integrated guide to free market economics, beginning with first principles and advancing in a logical procession. The text is filled with illustrations and examples to make less obvious principles more readily understandable, and suggested activities which the high school teacher can make use of in the classroom to dramatize and illustrate important key concepts. Questions are supplied which can be used to enhance the students' understanding of sound economics through thought-provoking discussion or individual study.

A list of some of the chapters gives an indication of the book's scope: What is Economics?; The Nature of the Individual—Values and Actions; Private Property and Exchange; Prices, Pricing; Savings, Tools and Production; and Money, Credit and Banking.

The Syllabus covers a broad range of economic applications. It even provides a guide to help explain to the student the basic workings of the stock market, including an explanation of the daily transactions page of the newspaper.

Just as any book has a unifying concept underlying its text and structure, in Mrs. Greaves' Syllabus, "The theme throughout is that economics is a study of the consequences of (1) individual choices which depend on the ideas individuals hold and (2) individual actions taken in the conscious attempt to attain the various goals held by the individuals concerned. Current economic events become intelligible only when explained on the basis of economic laws derived from this insight into the nature of human action." (My emphasis.)

Although designed as a study plan to aid the high school teacher in teaching a comprehensive course in free-market economics, this syllabus can be used by beginning economics students for studying on their own. "This Syllabus. . . contains many suggestions for introducing and explaining economics to younger students, as well as material to challenge older students and even adult readers."

A Libertarian Think Tank?

Yes. And it's about time.

The right has its American Enterprise Institute. The left its Institute for Policy Studies. And the liberals have their Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

So why not us? Surely the libertarian movement deserves its own permanent foundation committed to the study of ideas and the evaluation of political and social alternatives.

A small group of libertarian scholars and writers agreed that it does. They met and formulated plans for the Center for Libertarian Studies. The Center, they decided, would ultimately serve as the nation's major source of libertarian scholarship.

Consider for a moment the impact of America's established political foundations.

Research done at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions led directly to the Kennedy-Johnson "War on Poverty." The Institute for Policy Studies has played a major role in shaping the strategies of the left. And the American Enterprise Institute, says Karl Hess, "presses the conservative cause more effectively and persistently than any group in America and perhaps in the entire world."

However we may disagree with the ideologies of these organizations, we must admit that they're on the right track tactically. They know that ideas are the key to social change. If we're serious about achieving a libertarian society, we must create a climate to encourage the basic theory and research that will make it possible. In the long run, no task is more important for the advance of liberty.

The creation of such a climate is precisely the purpose of the Center for Libertarian Studies.

The Center will assist deserving young scholars, generate an interchange among the various disciplines concerned with human liberty, consider alternative strategies of social change, and serve as a vital link between Academia and the "real world."

Though still in infancy, the Center has already attracted the support of some of the world's best-known libertarians. The CLS board of advisors includes such distinguished names as Nobel Prize-winner Friedrich A. Hayek, Robert Nozick, Mrs. Ludwig von Mises, Mrs. F.A. Harper, Felix Morley, Henry Hazlitt and Yale Brozen.

The functions of the Center.

The program of the Center for Libertarian Studies includes the following activities:

The Libertarian Scholars Conference, a highly-successful series which began in 1972, and which was the precursor of CLS.

The Journal of Libertarian Studies, a new publication which will serve as a forum for the best in libertarian scholarship.

A Fellows Program, to provide young students of liberty with financial assistance, enabling them to study with the Center's New York City-area resident scholars.

The Center Newsletter, to keep our supporters informed about the activities and accomplishments of CLS.

CLS Occasional Papers, and the Educational Project, to promote wider understanding of libertarian ideas.

And finally, looking toward the future, a permanent physical facility, which will be located in the New York metropolitan area.

Of course, there's a lot more to be said about these activities. We'll be glad to send you a copy of the Center's official prospectus, which discusses each one in more detail. Just check the appropriate box on the coupon below.

What's in it for you?

Frankly, we think you should join and support the Center for Libertarian Studies because it's one of the best ways for you to help create a truly free society.

But we realize that it will take a while to achieve that goal. So in the meantime, we'd like to offer you some more immediate and tangible rewards in return for making a contribution to the Center.

We've created a special package of benefits for our supporters, whom we call "Friends of the Center for Libertarian Studies."

As a "Friend of the Center," you'll receive:

- A one-year subscription to the Center for Libertarian Studies Newsletter.
- A one-year subscription to the Journal of Libertarian Studies.
- All of the Center's Occasional Papers.

- Invitations to exclusive receptions and seminars featuring prominent libertarian speakers.

- Substantial discounts on publications, conferences, courses and lectures.

- A handsome card identifying you as a "Friend of the Center for Libertarian Studies."

- To top it all off, your contribution is tax-deductible.

So, all things considered, you've got a number of very selfish reasons to support the Center for Libertarian Studies. Not least of which is the possibility of achieving Freedom in Our Time.

Join us in the battle of ideas for liberty. Clip the coupon, and write a check, today.

Your contribution is tax-deductible if check is made payable to the Foundation for New Educational Projects, Inc. Please note on your check: "For the Center for Libertarian Studies."

Become a Friend of the Center for Libertarian Studies. 200 West 58 Street, Suite 5D New York, N.Y. 10019

You're right! The libertarian movement needs and deserves a think tank of its own. Sign me up as a "Friend of the Center for Libertarian Studies." I understand that my contribution entitles me to receive the full package of benefits described above.*

- ☐ Enclosed is my contribution for:
☐ $1000 ☐ $500 ☐ $250 ☐ $100 ☐ Other $
- ☐ I want to know more about the Center. Send me a copy of your official prospectus. (Enclosed is $1 to cover postage and handling.)

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____

Zip _____

*We're grateful for any donation you can make. However, in order to qualify as a "Friend of the Center," and receive the package of benefits listed above, your contribution must be $100 or more.

“Bettina Bien-Greaves has paved the way for a solidly based education in sound economics for ...the serious student of any age.”

As a handy accompaniment to the Syllabus, Mrs. Greaves has compiled a Basic Reader of eighty-one essays "arranged . . . in broad subject categories so that they form in effect a 'course of study' in and of themselves. A substantial understanding of free market economics may be gained by reading this volume systematically from beginning to end." Each essay has been selected by Mrs. Greaves "to help explain or to illustrate some aspect of the theory of free market economics." Although the Syllabus is best used with the Reader, the Reader can be used separately, on its own.

The Syllabus suggests essays in the Basic Reader as well as other sources for relevant material, and each of the volumes contains a glossary.

The Basic Reader is divided into sixteen groups corresponding to the sixteen chapters of the Syllabus. It presents essays by such notable free-market economists as Ludwig von Mises, Henry Hazlitt, Percy L. Greaves, Jr., Israel Kirzner, Hans Sennholz, Leonard Read, David Ricardo, and Frederic Bastiat. Writings by James Madison, David Crockett, and John Stuart Mill, to name just a few, are also included.

The two-volume Free Market Economics provides a much-needed guide to teaching free market economics to the very important and overlooked (in this regard) high school student, or student of any age who is interested in learning free-market economics on his or her own. Bettina Bien-Greaves has paved the way for a solidly based education in sound economics for both the high school student and the serious student of any age. Her two-volume Free Market Economics was sorely needed and should be a welcome addition to any library—at school or home. ©1975, Laissez Faire Books. Reviewed by Sheldon Wasserman / Foundation for Economic Education, 1975 / $6 each, $10 a set

Music IN REVIEW

Tom Waits

By Steven Utley

What goes around is supposed to come around.

In the mid-'50s, Elvis Presley stood pop music on its ear and cleared the way for Chuck Berry, Little Richard, Jerry Lee Lewis, Bo Diddley, Buddy Holly. The early '50s had been given over to vapid dribble like Patti Page's "Tennessee Waltz," music too bland, too weak, to compete with rock and roll, the early, raw stuff that made up in sheer joyous lin have been only intermittently diverting ("Rocketman" and "Stairway to Heaven," respectively). Carly Simon, James Taylor, Bonnie Raitt, Jimmy Buffett and certain others have been entertaining. But... Where are the innovators?

Why is it that the most interesting, the most vital performers around today are holdovers (one might even say relics) from the music scene of the '60s?

What goes around is supposed to come around, damn it!

I am not about to suggest that Tom Waits is the Someone for whom I've waited, lo, these many years past. For one thing, he isn't. For another thing, even if he was, he probably wouldn't accept the honor.

Tom Waits is not a rocker, not a picker or a balladeer. He is a pedestrian pianist and anything but a flash on guitar. He comes to us out of Miles Davis, Charlie Parker, Ray Charles, Lenny Bruce, and Jack Kerouac. He comes to us as though sprung from the forehead of Zeus, full-blown and secure in what he is doing and yet amid the absolute modicum of hype (thereby avoiding the fate that befell David Bowie, Bruce Springsteen, etc.: that of not living up to promoters' flack). Waits may luck out and have a million-selling long-playing album, though this isn't too likely. He will never reach Top 40 radio charts. He may turn up on "NBC Saturday Night" but never as a guest of Sonny and Cher. He is a nightclub performer, and he doesn't particularly enjoy concert tours.

“He can sing blues as well as Dylan or Mick Jagger or Eric Burdon ever could.”

Dressed in a rumpled suit, Waits scuffs on to a stage to do a warm-up for the headlined rock band. He looks out of place in an auditorium. His shirt and tie are loosened at the throat, his cap is pulled down low over his eyes. He chain-smokes. Only twenty-seven at this writing, he nevertheless gives the impression of an older man, one who is crowding thirty-five. This is not altogether affectation: Waits has been around, an itinerant since age seventeen. He snaps his fingers

(Continued on page 19)

The Heart of Saturday Night

Asylum 7E-1015 / $6.98

Nighthawks at the Diner

Asylum 7E-2008 (2 records) / $7.98

Order from Sabin's Records, Dept. LR, 3212 Pennsylvania Ave., SE, Washington, DC 20020.

energy what it almost always (save in the case of Berry's sly lyrics) lacked in sophistication. By the turn of the decade, though, rock and roll had petered out. The Pelvis had been through the Army and come out scrubbed and subdued. Berry was in jail on a statutory rape rap. Lewis had married his cousin and been flayed by public opinion. Little Richard had decided to become a preacher. Holly and too many others were dead. It was jerk music time again, time for Fabian and Paul Anka, Paul of Paul and Paula warbling "I've waited so long for school to be through/Paula I can't wait no more for you," hot rod music, surfing music, the Ventures, and only an occasional cut by Lonnie Mack or Solomon Burke to relieve the awfulness.

And then, hurrah-huzzah, 1964, the Beatles came across the Great Water to revitalize rock and roll, to remind us of what we'd forgotten. In their wake came the Rolling Stones, the Animals, Bob Dylan, the Byrds, the Lovin' Spoonful, the Who, the Yardbirds, Cream, Buffalo Springfield, the Jimi Hendrix Experience, singers, musicians and composers in incredible variety and profusion. Fun while it lasted. Got us through the decade, didn't it?

But the Beatles broke up, the Animals and the Spoonful lost their way, Cream and Springfield and Yardbirds and Byrds split into soloists and new groups and still newer groups. Dylan became the Thomas Pynchon, or at least the J.D. Salinger, of rock, hiding out on his mountain top. Hendrix and Brian Jones of the Stones and others went the way of Buddy Holly. It became jerk music time once again. John Denver, Leon Russell, a lot of dull, loud bands like Three Dog Night and Grand Funk. I shrugged philosophically and decided to wait until Someone came along. Someone who would do for the '70s what Elvis and the Beatles had done before. Glitter rock. Olivia Newton-John. Paul Anka again, burbling out "Having My Baby." Disco pop.

I've been waiting for more than half of the decade now, and, frankly, I've begun to lose heart. Elton John and Led Zeppe-

DEFENDING THE UNDEFENDABLE

The Pimp, Prostitute, Scab, Slumlord, Libeler, Moneylender, and Other Scapegoats in the Rogue's Gallery of American Society

by Walter Block

Foreword by Murray N. Rothbard

Illustrations by Rodrigues

Dr. Block's list of "undefendables" reads like a rogue's gallery—from the blackmailer to the drug pusher, the moneylender to the prostitute, the employer of child labor to the strip miner—all the object of universal revulsion. They are accused of perpetuating evils, but are really scapegoated by the very people who try to suppress them.

Many of these extreme case studies of the reviled and scorned in our society have considerable shock value. The author fearlessly and with trenchant logic demonstrates their considerable economic and social merit, and forces the reader to think and rethink his initial response. The book, with its provocative and genuinely challenging claims, demonstrates that these so-called "scoundrels" never engage in reprehensible acts of initiatory aggression.

Although written in a lively and humorous style, Dr. Block proves the serious political-philosophical point that in a just society all deviant but non-aggressive behavior should be permitted.

With a commentary by

F.A. von Hayek, Nobel Laureate

$9.95

and 50¢ postage

... We can heartily congratulate Dr. Block on bringing to our attention some highly challenging, provocative, iconoclastic, and courageous interpretations.

Dr. Albert Ellis, Executive Director, Institute for Advance Study in Rational Psychotherapy

It is a magnificent book, a trail-blazer. I would call it "Drano for Clogged Minds," including my own, except that Drano is neither amusing nor stimulating, and this book is both. I suggest buying two copies: one for yourself and one for the person you want most to catch up with you.

Roger Lea MacBride

Startling and illuminating! Block's lucid defenses often convince; sometimes they lead us to sharpen our attack. In either case, the reader cannot fail to be instructed and challenged by this mind-stretching, provocative, and occasionally infuriating book.

Robert Nozick, Department of Philosophy, Harvard University

Many years ago Hazlitt's little masterpiece, ECONOMICS IN ONE LESSON, demonstrated how, in order to measure the consequences of economic activities, one must look beyond their immediately obvious effects to their secondary effects. Here, Professor Block sets out highly specific, and sometimes shocking examples of Hazlitt's thesis. By concentrating on the positive economic contributions of extreme cases, he forces the reader's consideration and greater appreciation of the principles of ECONOMICS IN ONE LESSON.

Robert D. Kephart, Publisher, LIBERTARIAN REVIEW

This witty and wonderful book is a veritable manual of the "joy of freedom." If men and women were now only half as interested in liberty as they are in lust, we would not have half the problems we have, and could cope with the rest with candor and courage.

Dr. Thomas S. Szasz, Department of Psychiatry, State University Hospital, Syracuse, N.Y.

The most entertaining and one of the most instructive economics books I've read. Block's unique style helps you see what's going on around you quickly and clearly. I think the book is terrific. Taking the most extreme examples possible and clarifying them, will do more to bend the reader's economic thinking than a slow steady course in good economics might do.

Harry Browne, author of HOW YOU CAN PROFIT FROM THE COMING DEVALUATION

FLEET PRESS CORPORATION

160 Fifth Avenue

New York City 10010

Formation of the State

THE STATE

By Lawrence Krader

Central to the growth and development of libertarian political philosophy is the theory of how states come to exist. The most relevant input to such theory thus far has been the classic Gumplovicz-Oppenheimer thesis (See Franz Oppenheimer's The State, reviewed by Murray Rothbard in LR, 9/75.)

This thesis rejects previous concepts of state formation based on voluntary agreement or social contract. Instead, the origin of the state is seen to lie in conquest and aggression.

“The state is merely a political institution. People invented it. There is nothing sacred or inevitable about its existence.”

As crucially important and radically significant as this insight is, however, certain technical problems arose regarding the applicability of the thesis to certain historical societies. Increasing amounts of ethnological data seemed to have generated anomalies to the Oppenheimer paradigm.

But even newer research by anthropologist Robert Carneiro only served to revalidate the essential truth of the state's aggressive origins. While warfare is a necessary condition for the rise of states, Carneiro proposed that it is not a sufficient one. This led to his own “circumscription” theory to explain the particular conditions under which warfare functioned as a state-creating mechanism. The result is a neocoercive theory that integrates the Oppenheimer anomalies.

Valuable though it is, Carneiro's work (A Theory of the Origin of the State) is all too short and narrow in its focus. Lawrence Krader's Formation of the State gives both depth and width to the field. He studies state formation in a number of settings and presents empirical evidence from a choice spectrum of cultures in time and place.

Starting with an anthropological theory of the state that considers the historical function of societies without states, Krader draws the following state typology: (1) simple societies without a state (Eskimos, Bushmen, Pygmies), (2) stateless societies with institutions leading to the state (the Kpelle of Liberia, and the Shilluk of the Sudan), (3) the emergent state (Ankole in East Africa, typically arising through conquest), and (4) the state proper (ancient Egypt, medieval Russia, and the Mongol Empire).

Krader readily dismisses such fallacies as Maritain's conception of the state as metaphysical abstraction, the organic interpretations of August Schaeffle and Herbert Spencer, the collective-will fantasies of J. Bluntschli, Hobbes' state-society synthesis, Mussolini's corporative state of superpersonal group-persons, Machiavellism, and Hans Kelsen's “state as community” idea. There's a pointed discussion of the grossly indiscriminate way such ideas assume the wholeness of human action grouped in terms such as “people” or “nation”—implicitly affirming the concepts of both methodological and substantive individualism.

In opposition to such dead-ends, Krader's own analysis is much more realistic. The state is merely a political institution. People invented it. There is nothing sacred or inevitable about its existence. Societies can be—and have been—ordered and structured by means other than the state.

Krader has one terminological quirk that may seem confusing at first glance. He maintains that although there have been stateless societies, there can not be governmentless ones. The problem is that he uses the term government too broadly. Too much stretching is needed to have the one concept cover such diversities as, say, the ordering devices of the Ibos and the Pakhtun on the one hand, and the American or Soviet systems on the other. The integration of such diverse entities would require—at the very least—some type of symbolic differentiation such as G_0 for the first two elements of the above set and G_x for the second pair.

More important, however, is the necessity to differentiate conceptually between the true governments of the later and the order-structures (religious, clanish, economic, or whatever) of the former. I assume that if he were presented with a model for a free-market anarchist society, Krader would view it as just another (though possibly unique and exotic) kind of “government.” Such classifications are too all-inclusive to function effectively.

“Societies can be—and have been—ordered and structured by means other than the state.”

Otherwise there's much of value in Formation of the State. Krader has no particular love or respect for the state (or for what is in actuality government as well). He views the whole subject coolly, dispassionately, and objectively. The result is another important step in the necessary demystification of the state—which is preliminary to its dismantlement. Reviewed by William Danks / Prentice-Hall, 1968, out of print / $2.40

EVERY YEAR OR SO IT DOES
YOU GOOD TO READ SOMETHING THAT WILL MAKE YOUR BLOOD BOIL.

THIS WILL DO IT.

Ads to sell books are supposed to go into enormous detail, lavish praise, long descriptions. We'll merely say that Thomas and Richard Tedrow have done an exhaustive job of research, their book is well written, carefully presented, and what you've suspected all along is true. The 220 pages contain facts never before disclosed. It's a book you must have on your own bookshelf, preferably toward the front.

We don't, of course, expect you to take our word for that. You're invited to examine “Death at Chappaquiddick” for 10 days on an absolute, no-strings-attached money-back guarantee. If you decide the book is not an invaluable investment, just return it within the 10 days, and we'll refund your $8.95 in full, no questions asked.

P.S. Mary Jo Kopechne did not die from drowning.

At your bookstore or use this coupon

To: Green Hill Publishers, Inc.
P.O. Box 738-D
Ottawa, Illinois 61350

Yes. Send me the hard-cover “Death at Chappaquiddick” for 10-day examination. Check or money-order for $8.95 is enclosed.

Charge to ☐ Mastercharge ☒ BankAmericard

Account no. _____

Expiration date _____

name _____

address _____

city _____

state _____

zip _____

Brudnoy—(Continued from page 10)

to be an imaginative series of variations on a theme of gore.

We have in this movie the cleverest smashing of all sorts of western cliches: a young (and handsome) horse thief gets his, at the end of a rope, accompanied to his hanging place by a rich rancher with whom he discusses the latter's really nifty collection of books; a brothel run by emaciated crones, all looking like that licentious biddy in Playboy cartoons; and on through and through the movie. We have lovely landscapes, some moments of wry comedy, some casually discarded lines that come back to give one a second giggle (like the one tossed off by a horse thief tromping up to Canada to steal the Mounties' mounts, mumbling about “why'd they have to put Canada way up there?!"); we have Nicholson, who is fabulous. And we have Brando. O Marlon, what a crock!

Marlon Brando comes on looking like Annie Oakley and sounding like Paddy O'Google of County O'Korney. Marlon Brando squirms and whistles and hums, he sings, he chortles, he mumbles—he has the patent on mumbling, as Rod Steiger has the patent on breathing huskily—he rolls his eyes and jiggles his Santa tummy, he runs around in drag, he shakes his fringey buckskin like a Bar Mitzvah boy fingering his prayer shawl fringes before the Big Moment, he never lets up. He acts up, he thumbs his nose at the whole endeavor, not, because it's rotten—it isn't when he's not in it—but because (because?) he's gone somehow, sometime around the period of Godfather, or Last Tango in Paris, from crown prince to clown poseur, and he wrecks everything he touches, wrecks everything he touches firmly, finally, foully.

Brando doesn't care about film acting any more; he says as much when, on rare occasion, he can be collared for an interview. More power to him in his fabulous escape to his island some miles north of Tahiti, and may he enjoy doing his time as big white brother of his red brothers and sisters. But then he pops into a movie at a million and a half bucks for a few weeks' “work” and sets out to louse up the character director Arthur Penn and screenwriter Thomas McGuane concocted, frustrated that Penn wouldn't let him do with his character of Robert E. Lee Clayton what he felt in his bounteous heart he should do with it (“I wanted this character to be different, a serious study of the American Indian”), so frustrated that he just took the money and ran, leaving behind a devastated hulk, a movie brimming with possibilities, occasionally soaring, occasionally beautiful, and torn to bits almost every moment Marlon Brando condescended to step into it. His is a movie career in shreds; he is a huge talent left for the vultures, a master actor gone loopy. O Marlon, we used to love you, and you, us; what the devil went wrong? ■

“O Marlon, we used to love you, and you us; what the devil went wrong?”

REVOLUTION . . . IN AMERICA?

YES, MILLIONS OF AMERICANS ARE TIRED OF:

- EVER HIGHER TAXES
- GREATER BUREAUCRATIC INTERFERENCE
- LESS INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM

JOIN THE MILLIONS SAYING "NO!" TO THE I.R.S.

-READ!-

TAX REVOLT

BY RENE BAXTER

THE RENE BAXTER LETTER, AN INTERNATIONALLY READ ECONOMIC NEWSLETTER, RECENTLY PUBLISHED A SERIES OF THREE ISSUES ON THE TAX REVOLT MOVEMENT.

THESE ISSUES COVERED IN GREAT DETAIL TWO OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL METHODS TO STOP SUPPORTING SOCIALISM--SAFELY AND LEGALLY.

NOW THESE THREE LETTERS, WHICH NORMALLY COST $3 EACH, ARE AVAILABLE IN BOOKLET FORM.

YOU CAN GET THIS COMPREHENSIVE STRATEGY BOOK, POSTPAID, FOR ONLY $2.

HAPPY TAXPAYING

BY BYRON FOOTE

MR. FOOTE, A FURNITURE MANUFACTURER FROM CALIFORNIA, TELLS HOW HE HAS SUCCESSFULLY STOPPED THE IRS AND PLUNDERING (TAXING) AGENCIES FROM VIOLATING HIS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS SINCE 1968.

BYRON SAYS THAT ONE UNLAWFUL SEIZURE AGAINST HIM IN 1968 HAS COST THE IRS AT LEAST $5 MILLION IN COLLECTIONS SO FAR, AND WHEN IT COSTS THEM THEIR ENTIRE REVENUE SERVICE HE'LL BE JUST ABOUT SQUARE.

THIS BOOK WILL TELL YOU HOW TO BECOME A HAPPY TAXPAYER, FOR ONLY $3.

the FREEDOM FIGHTER

THE FREEDOM FIGHTER IS THE VOICE OF TODAY'S REVOLUTION, AS THOMAS PAINE'S COMMON SENSE WAS TO THE REVOLUTION OF 1776. THE FREEDOM FIGHTER IS PUBLISHED TWICE EACH MONTH AND MAILED TO SUBSCRIBERS THROUGHOUT THE LAND.

THE FREEDOM FIGHTER GIVES YOU PHILOSOPHICAL AMMUNITION AS WELL AS PRACTICAL STEP-BY-STEP STRATEGIES TO INCREASE YOUR PERSONAL FREEDOM. THE FREEDOM FIGHTER KEEPS YOU UP TO DATE ON EVENTS IN THE BATTLE AND EDUCATION ON HOW TO FIGHT IN COURT, BOTH OFFENSIVELY AND DEFENSIVELY.

THE FREEDOM FIGHTER WAS STARTED BY RENE BAXTER, AN INTERNATIONALLY READ ECONOMIC ANALYST AND INVESTMENT ADVISOR. HE CANCELLED A PROFITABLE NEWSLETTER ON ECONOMICS TO DEVOTE FULL TIME TO THE FIGHT FOR THE RESTORATION OF OUR RIGHTS AS SOVEREIGN CITIZENS. HERE'S WHAT HE TOLD HIS ECONOMIC NEWSLETTER SUBSCRIBERS:

"The American Revolution, begun 200 years ago, is again a hot war. My brothers are already in the field, engaged in a life-or-death struggle for freedom. They are calling me to come help them, and I cannot let them down.

"I have no desire to live in a Socialist slave pen. And that, my friend, is the shape of the future if I take no action to prevent it.

"If you are tired of feeling like an unimportant cog in a runaway Welfare State Machine, here is your chance to reassert your Sovereignty and regain your personal control over the course of this nation's history. Please, won't you join the fight?"

ORDER FORM

Please rush me the books I have checked.

- ☐ TAX REVOLT, by Rene Baxter. I enclose $2.00.
- ☐ HAPPY TAXPAYING, by Byron Foote. I enclose $3.00
- ☐ Please enter my subscription to THE FREEDOM FIGHTER for one year, 24 issues. I enclose $48.00
- ☐ Please send me a trial subscription to THE FREEDOM FIGHTER (4 issues). I enclose $10.00.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____

STATE _____

ZIP _____

★★★★★★

The combined analysis of these books of Twight and Graham gives the reader a much better than usual understanding of the developing nature of the American System. There is, however, a grave flaw of omission in this analysis, an omission that is particularly pronounced in Twight's book and present to a lesser degree in Graham's.

In Twight's book there is inexplicably not one mention of the Pentagon, of the WIB, of the OPA, of military expenditures and contracts, or of national security management. Although there is historical recognition of the military's existence and role in Graham's book, he emphasizes the importance of militarism's role in leading us to the fascist-planned economy little more than does Twight. It is as though the work of Melman, Weinstein, Neiberg, Barnett, Beard, Dennis, Nisbet, O'Connor, and dozens of others had never been published. One begins to wonder if the authors are not consciously or unconsciously attempting to create an historical vacuum so that the untidy reality of war preparations and militarism does not complicate the theses of their respective studies.

What the Twight-Graham complementary analysis needs is a large, healthy dose of John T. Flynn's profound insights concerning the ubiquitous and destroying role of war, war preparations, and militarism in general, for it is militarism that cements the ties between business and government. It is militarism that places increasing power in the hands of the government to better control the economy. It is militarism that can most easily be used as a cover to create and maintain government jobs. It is militarism that can, with most political acceptability, be used for purposes of Keynesian pump-priming. It is militarism that permits the State to become, in Twight's words, a full-fledged "market surrogate." It is militarism whose shroud of secrecy creates widespread suspicion and a rampant Garrison State mentality. It is, in short, militarism that has been the chief propellant thrusting the United States economy into the planned society, into the throes of the fascist quagmire.

Justice can hardly be done to Flynn's masterpiece in a review. One must read and savor for oneself the brilliance of analysis and of prophecy found in the pages of As We Go Marching. I am convinced that the Flynn book is one of the few truly great works of socioeconomic analysis written in this century. I would go so far as to contend that if one has not read and digested the analysis and prophecy contained in this book, it is highly unlikely that one would have much understanding of the essential nature of the American System.

We are fortunate that As We Go Marching has recently been republished as an inexpensive paperback. I urge you to buy a copy and to immerse yourself in it. Study it along with the Twight and the Graham, and you are sure to develop a far better understanding of the increasingly controlled world in which we are forced to live. Only with such understanding will we ever be able to figure out what to do in order to change the system. Reviewed by Walter E. Grinder / Marching / Free Life Editions, 1973 / $3.45 / Planned Society / Oxford University Press, 1975 / $11.95 / Fascist Economy / Arlington House, 1975 / $12.95

Stine—(Continued from page 3)

These are quibbles. If we do break free of Earth and take our rightful places as inhabitants of the Solar System, G. Harry Stine will deserve a place in that achievement's history. He shows us it can be done. Out there it's raining soup, and Stine is telling us to grab a bowl.

Any reviewer can thin of ways a book ought to be "improved": that is, made more conformable to the reviewer's prejudices. So what? I recommend this book, and I'll put my quibbles in a private letter to the author. For the sake of us all I hope The Third Industrial Revolution will have the influence it deserves.

Read it. You'll be glad you did. Reviewed by Jerry Pournelle / Putnam's, 1975 / $7.95

The Healing Factor: Vitamin C Against Disease

By Irwin Stone

Irwin Stone is a biochemist, now retired, who developed a great interest in vitamin C soon after it had been identified as the substance L-ascorbic acid, a derivative of the sugar glucose, in 1932. Over a period of 40 years he collected information about vitamin C from the scientific and medical literature, and also carried out some investigations in his own laboratory. In 1949 the British biochemist G.H. Bourne, who is now director of the Yerkes Primate Laboratory in Florida, pointed out that the gorilla gets in its vegetarian diet about four and a half grams of vitamin C each day, which is 100 times the amount that most people get in their food and 100 times the amount (45 mg per day) recommended by the Food and Nutrition Board of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences National Research Council. He suggested that the optimum intake of vitamin C, the amount that puts people in the best of health, might well be much larger than the recommended amount, perhaps one or two grams per day. Stone formulated some additional arguments; for example, he pointed out that most animals manufacture vitamin C in amounts (converted to the body weight of an adult human) between two and 19 grams per day. From these arguments and from published accounts of the value of vitamin C in controlling various diseases, he reached the conclusion that most people are in needlessly poor health because of their low intake of vitamin C. He described them as suffering from the disease hypoascorbemia, a deficiency of ascorbic acid in the blood, and recommended a regular intake of about three grams per day, to be increased at the first sign of illness, such as the onset of a cold.

He sent me copies of the four papers on this subject that he had published in the years 1965 to 1967 and urged me to study the effect on health of an increased intake of this vitamin. My discussions with physicians and nutritionists led me to believe that they had for the most part formed a negative opinion about the value of vitamin C because of lack of knowledge of the facts. I accordingly in 1970 wrote my book Vitamin C and the Common Cold, in which the evidence that vitamin C provides a valuable amount of protection against the common cold is discussed.

In his book Irwin Stone presents his arguments for a high intake of vitamin C. He discusses the evidence, as reported in about 700 scientific and medical papers to which references are given, that an increased intake of vitamin C has value in preventing and treating not only the common cold but also other viral diseases, bacterial diseases, cardiovascular diseases, arthritis, allergies and asthma, ulcers, diabetes and hypoglycemia, mental disease, and cancer, in addition to its recognized uses in aiding the healing of burns, wounds, and fractured bones, and in helping to remove toxic substances from the body. Many of the studies are old, dating back 30 or 40 years, and some have been criticized as not having been well designed and executed. Nevertheless, the weight of the evidence as presented by Stone strongly supports the conclusion that a high intake of vitamin C improves health and increases resistance to disease, probably by strengthening the natural mechanisms of protection, such as the immune mechanism. Investigations carried out since the publication of the book support this conclusion. These include a number of studies of vitamin C and the common cold, a study by Murata and Morishige in Japan showing that an intake of two grams or more per day prevents serum hepatitis in surgical patients who receive blood transfusions, and a study by Ewan Cameron of Vale of Leven Hospital, Alexandria, Scotland, on the value of a high intake (10 grams or more per day) of vitamin C for cancer patients.

“Irwin Stone deserves our thanks.”

Irwin Stone deserves our thanks. His work, including writing this book, may well result in significant improvement in health and decrease in the amount of suffering caused by disease for many people. Reviewed by Linus Pauling / Grosset and Dunlap, 1972 / $1.95, pb; $6.95, hc

Nathaniel Branden's EXERCISE IN SELF-DISCOVERY

Nathaniel Branden

On this unusual cassette tape, Nathaniel Branden presents a psychological technique designed to help you solve personal problems by better understanding yourself and other people.

You can try this simple, two-person exercise at home, at your own convenience. It's based on techniques Dr. Branden employs in his practice of psychotherapy, and on principles outlined in his books, Breaking Free and The Disowned Self.

"Many of my clients have found it useful," says Dr. Branden, "and I have trained them how to use it at home. The very least it will do is [help you] to get to know yourself better and more deeply than you ever have before... and so will the person working with you."

"If two people really want to get to know each other and to reach the depths of intimacy that perhaps they never imagined possible, this technique will take them there. With practice, you may learn how to understand yourself much better and to understand why you do the things you do and to grow, in consequence."

Those who have used this cassette have been amazed at the results. By helping remove blocks to thinking, communicating, and relating to other people, the exercise enabled them to solve psychological problems, achieve greater happiness, and realize their own potential.

If you've already experienced Nathaniel Branden's Basic Relaxation and Ego-Strengthening Program, you're sure to find An Exercise in Self-Discovery even more rewarding.

Noted libertarian theorist Roy Childs, Jr. says, "This Exercise in Self-Discovery is something that I and a great many other people have found highly effective... Those who work with it seriously will find it to be of immense value. Highly recommended."

Tape 541 (43 min.) $9.95

OTHER CASSETTE RECORDINGS By Nathaniel Branden
BASIC RELAXATION AND EGO-STRENGTHENING PROGRAM/Tape 509 (30 Min.) $10
ALIENATION/Tape 552 (51 Min.) $9.95
DEALING WITH THE GIFTED CHILD/Tape 555 (47 Min.) $9.95
DISCOVERING THE UNKNOWN SELF/Tape 550 (91 Min.) $15
AN INFORMAL DISCUSSION OF BIOCENTRIC THERAPY/Tape 556 (70 Min.) $10.50
MAN-WOMAN RELATIONSHIPS: DISCUSSIONS WITH MEN/Tapes 534-35 (84 Min.) $20
DISCUSSIONS WITH WOMEN/Tapes 536-39 (157 Min.) $30; Both sets available for $50
FREE WILL AND GENETICS/Tape 804 (37 Min.) $9.95
INDEPENDENCE/Tape 805 (44 Min.) $9.95
LOVE AND ROMANTIC RELATIONSHIPS/Tape 811 (42 Min.) $9.95
THE NATURE OF FRIENDSHIP/Tape 813 (44 Min.) $9.95
THE NATURE OF INTELLIGENCE/Tape 810 (45 Min.) $9.95
THE NATURE OF REASON AND EMOTION/Tape 814 (79 Min.) $17
PROBLEMS OF MARRIAGE/Tape 806 (43 Min.) $9.95
THE PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECTS OF RELIGION/Tape 815 (88 Min.) $17
THE PSYCHOLOGY OF SEX/Tape 803 (43 Min.) $9.95
PSYCHOTHERAPY/Tape 808 (178 Min.) $34
SELF ESTEEM/Tape 802 (88 Min.) $17
GENERAL DISCUSSIONS ABOUT PSYCHOLOGY/Tape 812 (8 Hrs.) $90
THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PLEASURE AND SOCIAL METAPHYSICS/Tape 553 (47 Min.) $9.95
THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ROMANTIC LOVE/Tapes 801-816 (19 Hrs.) $144
PSYCHOTHERAPY AND THE OBJECTIVIST ETHICS/Tape 551 (72 Min.) $10.50
TEENAGERS' QUESTIONS ON SEX/Tape 554 (47 Min.) $9.95
ALL TAPES UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED.

☐ Send me An Exercise in Self-Discovery, Tape 541, $9.95.
☐ Send me the tape(s) I've checked above.
☐ I enclose payment of $_____ ☐ Charge my credit card:

☐ BankAmericard ☐ American Express AF134
☐ Master Charge ☐ Card # _____

Exp. Date _____
Signature _____

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

AUDIO-FORUM
901 N. Washington St. • Alexandria, VA 22314

Briefly IN REVIEW

Instead of Education By John Holt

"'Doing' as opposed to 'education,' or meaningful work versus learning under pressure, is what this people-oriented book is all about. If you describe to Holt's definition, e.g., education is 'something that some people do to others for their own good,' then his position that the educational establishment deprives us of 'the right to decide for ourselves how we will explore the world around us' makes great good sense. The failure of compulsory education is a dismal reality; efforts at reform are a waste of energy. . . . the author of Why Children Fail . . . calls for schools for 'do-ers,' which might use such resources as the Whole Earth Catalog or the Frog Pond in Boston Common; he praises a Danish school and urges parents to beat the school game. Lucid and provocative." —Publishers Weekly / Education / Dutton, 1976 / $8.95

A New Guide to Rational Living By Albert Ellis & Robert A. Harper

"Based on A Guide to Rational Living, A New Guide again presents the basics of Ellis' Rational-Emotive Therapy (RET) which is directed toward helping people change their emotions and actions by changing their attitudes and their thinking. In addition, reference is made to research in RET since 1961; a lengthy bibliography identifies titles documenting this research and includes many other relevant psychological references. The authors also discuss and evaluate several of the new therapy techniques, such as Primal Therapy, etc. . . . This is one of the most useful books in the self-help genre, and this revision should appear in most collections for its bibliography alone." —Martha Cornog in Library Journal / Psychology / Prentice-Hall, 1975 / $7.95

The Love of Liberty By Leonard Read

"Musicians are malicious. They tell such stories on each other! One says, 'Isn't Vivaldi marvelous? He wrote sixty violin concertos.' The other says: 'Nothing of the sort. All he did was write one violin concerto sixty times.' Leonard Read's twentieth book of essays on liberty reminds one of that barb, but points up the difference between music and the discourse of reason. A melody need be written only once and can be played forever. But the nuance of liberty must be balanced anew each day in relation to forces that would destroy it. Too much government. Too little understanding. Too much greed. Too little self-reliance. Too much politics. Too little self-discipline. Leonard Read patiently rewords his arguments once a year to fit the problems of the moment, arguing anew, unlike Vivaldi, but singing always the pure unchanging melody of human freedom. . . ." —Financial Book Digest / Political Philosophy / Foundation for Economic Education, 1975 / No price given

Synergetics

By R. Buckminster Fuller
with E.J. Applewhite

"This book is [Fuller's] bible—the distilled wisdom of a lifetime spent contemplating the Universe from angles and directions never before suspected. . . . Its wealth of closely packed ideas is inexhaustible. It will be a source of endless inspiration and stimulus to those engaged in the most urgent task of our time—the effort to save Spaceship Earth from disaster." —Arthur C. Clarke in Book Letter / Survival / Macmillan, 1975 / $25 and delivers cadenced stream-of-consciousness monologs, scat and talking blues. Most of the people in the audience don't know how to react, what to make of him. He will never revolutionize pop music.

Utley—(Continued from page 15)

I have seen Waits in concert and listened to his two albums on the Asylum label, The Heart of Saturday Night (7E-1015) and the two-record "live" set, Nighthawks at the Diner (7E-2008). His voice, a growly rasp, is in keeping with his appearance and his material. He can sing blues as well as Dylan or Mick Jagger or Eric Burdon ever could. He is also capable of singing with a sort of weary two A.M. poignancy, as on "San Diego Serenade" and "(Looking for) The Heart of Saturday Night." The world he inhabits and from which he addresses us is a sunless one, an insomniac's realm of all-night diners, rainy streets, and "bastard amber Velveeta yellow" taxi cabs, where the atmosphere is 40 percent cigarette smoke. It isn't an unrelievedly desperate place: Waits has a keen sense of humor, an eye and ear for startling but effective imagery—"the sky turned the color of Pepto Bismol." Raymond Chandler would have loved it.

Tom Waits will not revolutionize pop music. Rock and roll is of no concern to him, except, perhaps, as background noise coming out of a radio in some seedy diner. His antecedents are jazz and Beat literature. He will not steal any listeners away from Kiss or Bob Marley and the Wailers, whoever this week's most-talked-about star may be. He will go his own way, touring when he needs the money, retreating to his night clubs when he can. The best I can do, while waiting, perennially hopeful, for what has gone around to come around again, is to catch him whenever, wherever possible. ■

RICHARD SUTER PREDICTS:

GOLD AT $400 by DECEMBER, 1977
40% INFLATION DURING 1977
1978 - THE WORST DEPRESSION SINCE 1930

FIND OUT WHY!

SUBSCRIBE TO NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER TODAY!

YOU'LL LEARN HOW TO EARN PROFITS LIKE:

108% PROFIT IN 77 DAYS!
119% PROFIT IN 85 DAYS!
170% PROFIT IN 55 DAYS!
250% PROFIT IN 63 DAYS!

NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER advised subscribers on Dec. 11, 1972 to buy Japanese yen against the U.S. dollar. On February 28, 1973, when sale of yen was recommended; subscribers realized a profit of $4,300 per contract. NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER has been watching the currency markets for years. Prior to the August-December, 1971 currency crisis, subscribers were advised to put their cash in Swiss banks. By doing so they realized a 15% profit while maintaining their purchasing power. Again on October 15, 1973 and November 12, 1973, NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER advised to sell British pounds and Swiss francs against the dollar. On January 14, 1975, when these positions were closed, subscribers realized $4,775 and $6,825 profit per contract. Again on June 9, 1975 editor Suter advised that the dollar was set to make substantial gain, particularly against the Swiss franc. NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER recommended selling the franc against the dollar resulting in a profit of over $4,500 per contract on August 4, 1975. Again in August, editor Suter saw the opportunity to make huge profits from the fall British pound. On December 19, when those positions were closed, subscribers earned $2,500 per contract. The continuing drop of the pound has yielded subscribers $4,500 profit per contract from January, 1976 through April, 1976. NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER subscribers have made dramatic profits while protecting their capital from loss through devaluation and have, at the same time, made dramatic profits! While the general public has been losing money and buying power to devaluations and runaway inflation, subscribers to NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER have left the crowd and made big profits instead! Profits can still be made in the currency markets. Should you be short in pounds and long in the Swiss franc and mark during the remainder of 1976, NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER has the best profit information.

90% YEARLY COIN PROFITS

Since 1971 NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER has recommended various coin investments. These recommendations include a cross section of every type of United States Coinage and some foreign issues too. There were recommendations requiring only a $5 investment and others which required in excess of one thousand dollars. On an average, these recommendations have realized a profit of 90% yearly profit to NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER subscribers.

What are the best coin investments today? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER special reports give editor Suter's picks for maximum profits during the next coin boom, and you're even told when the next general, all-out, coin boom will hit.

FOLLOW THROUGH

NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER follows through all recommendations until sale is recommended. NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER never just makes a purchase recommendation and then leaves subscribers wondering what to do. Instead, NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER makes the much more difficult recommendations of when to sell for maximum profits.

SILVER

Silver hit its all time high price during 1974. Is it in for a repeat performance this year, or should you go short (profiting as the price moves lower) for maximum profits? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER answers these questions giving insight into how the drained resources of Great Britain will affect silver prices over the next year. How the government's "national defense stockpile" of silver may affect the silver price. How the Silver Users Association may again force the price of silver down.

Should your silver position be in a Swiss Bank Silver Claim Account, or on the London silver market, or in the United States market? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER gives you the full story.

USING THE TAX LAW

It's legally possible to avoid all income taxes on capital gains. This one special report can save you thousands of dollars of income taxes. As a new subscriber you'll receive this report free. Be sure to order your NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER subscription today. Just this one report can save you thousands of times the cost of a one year, 12 issue subscription.

GOLD

Gold is going to $400 an ounce just as sure as I'm human says editor Richard Suter. Knowing this, should you now buy gold coins, gold bullion or gold future contracts? In NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER editor Suter tells you which and when! This report gives important technical information which will permit you to earn, what we believe to be, maximum profits in 1975. NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER advised subscribers as early as October, 1974 that the price of gold would drop spectacularly during 1975. All during 1975 editor Suter advised readers to short gold, making subscribers almost 100% profit a month!

How will the continued gold dumping by the United States Government, which will soon be joined by the International Monetary Fund, affect the price of gold? Might the Soviet Union, in its need to buy United States wheat and other grains, be forced to sell so much gold as to force the price of gold back down to $70 an ounce? Are the Swiss banks currently engaged in a market fixing operation to hold the price of gold artificially low, or is it artificially high? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER special reports give you the scoop.

COPPER

During 1974 copper hit an all time record high price of $1.40 a pound. Since then the price has moved steadily down to the current quote of near 60¢ a pound. Copper may be the very best hedge against inflation, which editor Suter indicates will skyrocket in price with the continuing industrial expansion. Should you buy copper now for a 200% to 1000% profit during the next 12 months? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER special reports give you the outlook for maximum profits from copper investments. Subscribers taking our copper recommendations beginning in December, 1975 have realized $4,000 profit per contract through April, 1976.

PLATINUM

Platinum has been a traditional store of value. In the course of history, literally thousands of people have been able to buy their freedom with platinum. In recent years the demand for platinum has greatly increased. In Japan most precious jewelry is made from platinum instead of gold. All U.S. automobiles have a catalytic converter which depends on platinum for its effectiveness. What will these new industrial applications do to the price of platinum? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER gives our insight. Subscribers taking our platinum advice in February, 1976, realized $1,000 profit per contract by April, 1976.

FUTURE HAPPENINGS

The recession is quickly ending all over the world. During 1977 the word on everyone's tongue will be inflation. This inflation will spread to every corner of the world; commodity prices will greatly increase! When will it finally stop again? Will the next recession end in the worst depression known to earth? NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER gives you the full and complete review of upcoming economic events. Special reports give you an outline of when the economy will be in full bloom, and when the spiral will again wind down toward a recession, what events could push that recession into a depression, and what events could push government to create run-away inflation to create a "full employment economy" with 100% inflation a week! Special reports tell you how to hedge against further devaluations and inflation for maximum profits under the expected economic conditions predicted by seasoned economists under the direction of editor Suter.

ALL SPECIAL REPORTS FREE—SUBSCRIBE NOW

NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER is offering all these special reports free to new subscribers who act now while our supplies last. Editor Suter wants you to benefit from the continuing monetary and economic dislocations that will affect the world in years to come. By subscribing to NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER you'll have the advised judgement of seasoned economists and financiers who know economics, Wall Street and coins, too.

NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER is written for today's world. We don't tell you how the world should be operating, we tell you how to profit in today's real world. If you want down to earth profit facts send your subscription today. We'll immediately rush you all the special reports outlined FREE. You can't lose—see our guarantee—subscribe today!

GUARANTEE

If at any time you are not satisfied with NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER you may cancel your subscription—no questions asked—and receive an immediate cash refund for the remainder of your subscription term.

READER CAUTION

The profits indicated in this advertisement were actual purchase and sale recommendations to all subscribers of NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER. The editorial staff of NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER will continue to endeavor to find these outstanding profits for subscribers. However, the past is not a guarantee to the future. Subscribers cannot necessarily expect these profits in the future despite the best efforts of NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER.

NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER, DEPT. 183

P.O. Box 7212 (MPO) Chicago, Illinois 60680

National Hard Asset Reporter, Dept. 183
P.O. Box 7212, Main Post Office
Chicago, Illinois 60680

Here's my subscription order to NATIONAL HARD ASSET REPORTER. Rush me all special reports as outlined in your ad.

6 month subscription (6 issues) $22.00
12 month subscription (12 issue) $41.00

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____
STATE _____ ZIP _____

Libertarian Cross Currents

By Walter E. Grinder

•The Center for Libertarian Studies (200 West 58th Street, Suite 5D, New York City, NY 10019) has been formed to serve as a permanent center for scholarly communication among libertarians, both academic and nonacademic. The Center will continue to sponsor the annual Libertarian Scholars Conference and other conferences, seminars, and courses. The new Journal of Libertarian Studies will be published quarterly by the Center in cooperation with a major journal-publishing house. The JLS will be edited by Murray N. Rothbard, aided by an editorial board of 30 top libertarian scholars. The Center's Newsletter will be published twice annually to further facilitate communication among libertarians. A Center Fellows Program is being inaugurated to enable students of liberty to come to the New York City area to study with the area's many resident scholars. The Center's resources and attention will be divided among the aforementioned activities, which focus on developing and extending the frontiers of libertarian theory and scholarship, and on developing a Campus Services Program, which will aim to proliferate these scholarly insights on college and university campuses.

In many ways, the most important function of the Center will be to serve as a source of intellectual sustenance to the growing numbers of scholarly libertarians scattered throughout the country. The Center's founders and organizers are confident that with the help of its public financial supporters (you) the Center can be very instrumental in turning this country's intellectual focus toward a scholarship of individualism, liberty, peace, and the free market.

The launching of CLS—of which I am the executive director—is the culmination of a two-decade-long personal dream for me, and I promise that all involved will work as hard as we can to make the Center for Libertarian Studies a leading intellectual institution and an effective vehicle for ideological change. However, even though the Center has been able to assemble one of the most prestigious intellectual groupings ever put together by libertarians, the one thing it does not have is enough funds to actively develop all of the projects we feel must be developed to ensure a balanced, effective, and active scholarly program.

This is where you come in. The CLS cannot help you promote libertarian scholarship unless you help it. The Center needs not only your moral support but also your financial support. You can become a Friend of the Center by making a $100 tax-deductible "investment in freedom." The more Friends CLS has, the more work our personnel can do for liberty and for you. Won't you help CLS help you?

•Felix G. Rohatyn is rapidly becoming one of the most sought-after minds in the country for his ability to fuse business and government operations. A very good profile is to be found in "The Wizard of Lizard," New York Times Magazine, 21 March 1976.

•Gerald R. Rosen's "A Plan for the U.S. Economy?" (Dun's Review, March 1976) is a good overview of the planning debate from one who apparently favors planning and sees it as almost inevitable.

•I know of no one who does not concede that there remain a number of unexplained and very peculiar circumstances surrounding the various assassinations and assassination attempts in the U.S. beginning with the death of John F. Kennedy right down to the present. These numerous questions have become all the more relevant since the recent revelations concerning the connections between the CIA and organized crime and their combined machinations. It is very difficult to separate the facts from the fiction and rhetoric, but four recent books help: They've Killed the President, Robert Sam Anson (Bantam, 1975), The Assassinations: Dallas, and Beyond, ed. by Scott, Hoch, and Stetler (Vintage, 1976), Accessories After the Fact: The Warren Commission, the Authorities, and the Report, Sylvia Meagher (Vintage, 1976), and Government by Gunplay, ed. by Blumenthal and Yazjian (Signet, 1976).

•The recent attacks on Big Government are meeting a growing counterattack. Henry Fairlie's "In Defense of Big Government" (New Republic, 13 March 1976) is a case in point. As Fairlie sees it, "strong and efficient central government is the foundation of 20th century democracy." He is obviously correct, but then just what has been so great about twentieth century democracy? Is not twentieth century democracy closer to economic and political fascism than it is the free society? Another pro-Big Government analysis is put forth by Harvard professor George C. Lodge. His book The New American Ideology (New York: A.A. Knopf, 1975) contains an explicit call to follow the pattern of Japanese political-economy—a fusion of state and business. It has struck a responsive chord among a significant sector of American businessmen and intellectuals. (See Victor Lebor's review in The Nation, 6 March 1976.)

•For an excellent article by a fine young libertarian historian about the shifting and interesting career of conservative-libertarian John Chamberlain, see "The

AN AFTERWORD FROM Readers, Authors, Reviewers

Music to Our Ears

Congratulations on the new format for Libertarian Review. I think your approach is very well conceived and LR now stands poised to become a journal of major national significance.

EDWARD H. CRANE III
National Chairman, Libertarian Party
Washington, D.C.

Having followed LR from before its inception, I offer my heartiest congrats on your new expanded format! I have been involved in libertarianism from the time when most of the literature was xeroxed (And a book about libertarianism? Maybe in ten years. . . !). I am greatly impressed by the sophistication, the diversity, and the professionalism of your publication. These are virtues I see as crucial to any libertarian publication which expects to have any impact, so keep up the good work!

STEVE WHITE
La Jolla, Calif.

I think this issue [March-April '76] marks the emergence of Libertarian Review as a publication of solid stature rather than a newsletter.

Enclosed is my check for a subscription. I don't know whether this extends or renews my subscription, but congratulations are certainly in order and I am delighted with what you are accomplishing.

ROBERT LEFEVRE
Orange, Calif.

Letters from readers are welcome. Although only a selection can be published and none can be individually acknowledged, each will receive editorial consideration and may be passed on to reviewers and authors. Letters submitted for publication should be brief, typed, double spaced, and sent to LR, 901 N. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314.

Found the new issue of Libertarian Review in its novel format on my desk on return from a two-week campaign trip. Congratulations! A greatly improved format, and in a much more readable layout. That's a giant step forward.

ROGER LEA MACBRIDE
Charlottesville, Va.

I think the new format of Libertarian Review is attractive, readable, and professional.

LEE EDWARDS
Washington, D.C.

Rothbard's Secret Wish—Revealed!

Congratulations on the beautiful new format for LR! I have just one correction to make on Ralph Raico's splendid tribute [LR, March-April '76]: I am not proud of looking down-at-the-heels. On the contrary, I have always wanted to have the income and the life style of a Rockefeller and the looks of a Ronald Colman. I just never made it.

MURRAY N. ROTHBARD
New York, N.Y.

"Oh Lord!" Mr. R

I have read with reservations but with good will Mr. Riggensbach's first two essays on imaginative literature, but I cannot, oh Lord!, hold my tongue after reading installment three [LR, Dec. '75].

If Mr. Riggensbach regards Gulliver's Travels as a novel, then he should give some thought to Mrs. Behn's Oronooko, which is moderately contemporary and, as the first creative artistic antislavery document, surely has some claim to recognition in a historical evaluation of imaginative literature. Mrs. Behn's work is worth reevaluating, anyway.

I hope Mr. Riggensbach will give Conrad's novels another try. He will find in them imaginative recognition of futility and refusal to be defeated by this recognition.

Mr. Riggensbach included Woolf's Orlando but did not mention To the Lighthouse, that celebration of the imagination as the light and salvation of the concrete, or Mrs. Dalloway, which embraces the same theme only slightly less jubilantly.

What troubles me most is that Mr. Riggensbach resists the glories of Jane Austen. Bless his heart, maybe his problem is youth, which won't trouble him long. Give Miss Austen another chance, Mr. R. And another, if it is needed, and another. She will captivate you.

S. ANDERS
Winston-Salem, N.C.

"Unreadable"?

Letters to the editor usually take objection to something or other, and this is what I want to do now. I realize that Susanne Langer's Feeling and Form still appeals considerably to nonaestheticians, but as the very numerous reviews of her books have made clear, the central theses of her aesthetics are built upon vaguenesses, equivocations, outright fallacies, and generalizations from a few cases to a whole class. That one can get some feeling for works of art from her work cannot be denied, but that her work contains a clear and coherent aesthetic theory can hardly be asserted any longer in view of the volley of unanswered criticisms of her theory. The central term, "presentational symbol," for example, contains a nest of fallacies. See, for example, Morris Weitz' devastating review of Feeling and Form, "Symbolism in Art," in the Review of Metaphysics, VII, pp. 466-81; Ernest Nagel's review of Philosophy in a New Key, Journal of Philosophy, XL, 323-29; and C.L. Stevenson's critique of the whole position in "Symbolism in the Non-representational Arts," in my aesthetic anthology, Introductory Read- ings in Aesthetics (New York, Free Press, 1969). (See also my own essay, "The Concept of Artistic Expression," in the same volume.)

I doubt very much, however, that my disagreement with Riggensbach's account of great novels is the result of our disagreements on aesthetic theory. Not having the space to dwell on the reasons, I shall make a few brief points. Riggensbach omits entirely the one novel which historians of fiction consider the finest and most well-wrought novel of the English language, Henry Fielding's 18th-century classic Tom Jones—a masterpiece of style and plotting and characterization, not to mention a sense of humor that won't quit, and makes the rereading of the novel endlessly enjoyable. As for the 19th century, the Victorian era produced at least four first-rate novelists: Dickens, Thackeray, Trollope, and George Eliot. Though I do not go so far as F.R. Leavis in saying, "What need have we of Shakespeare when we have George Eliot's Middlemarch?" I would place this novel second only to Tom Jones among the great novels in the English language; contemporary novelists who pride themselves on subtle characterization and plot-construction could well use her work as a model. The only 19th century novelists who clearly excel her (and this in their breadth of scope rather than in their style or characterization) are three who did not write in English: Balzac, Tolstoy, and Dostoyevsky.

Coming closer to the turn of the century, there are at least two giants of English fiction, Joseph Conrad and Thomas Hardy. That Riggensbach should describe these (along with Jane Austen) as "unreadable" or "too uninteresting to finish" is almost too astounding to comprehend. Conrad is probably the greatest prose master of English style of the last hundred years (with the possible exception of Political Thought of John Chamberlain: Continuity and Conversion," South Atlantic Quarterly, Vol. 74 (Winter 1975), pp. 53-73.

• It was great to see Libertarian Party theoretician Bill Evers' full-fledged assault on superhawk James Schlesinger. Schlesinger is undoubtedly one of the most dangerous enemies of libertarian ideals in the country. See "Schlesinger: Spokesman of Interventionism," LP News, January-February 1976 (1516 P St., NW, Washington, DC 20005; subscriptions are $3 for six issues, $5 for 12 issues).

• The Abolitionist is the newsletter of the American Association for the Abolition of Involuntary Mental Hospitalization, Inc. This appears to be a very worthy group. In the March Abolitionist, Lynne Henderson points out the psychiatric powers hidden in the infamous Criminal Justice Reform Act of 1975 (s.1). For more information write AAAIMH, Inc., c/o PO University of Santa Clara, CA 95053.

• For a useful journalistic summary of all sides of the issues involved in the complex Middle East situation, see the March-April issue of Skeptic, entitled, "Israel or Oil?"

• For far too many years most libertarian "real world" analysis has been little more than a number of floating abstractions or generalities too broad to really act upon. For action to take place, general principles must be carefully connected in some way to specific issues or classes of issues. A mass movement is never motivated solely by appeals to broad philosophic principles per se (even though it is true that narrower groups of morally concerned and intellectually active individuals are so motivated). It is, it seems to me, the duty of libertarian movement intellectuals (and here I use the term intellectual in the Hayekian manner: all those who are familiar with and who deal with ideas on some regular basis) to become "brokers of ideas," carefully connecting principles to issues.

In the past two years, two truly significant socio-political documents have moved to fill this void. First was the Libertarian Party platform that was adopted at the August 1975 convention. The LP platform is a good solid attempt to move from vague generalities to an application of moral principles to specific socioeconomic problems. The compromises inherent in all collective political documents tend to vitiate the "purity" of the analysis, but one can easily discount the several faults and still appreciate the significance of this important document. Most of the LP's position papers are equally good in relating principle to issue. (For more information write to Libertarian Party, 1516 P Street NW, Washington, DC 20007.)

A more recent and even more significant illustration of what I mean is the very sophisticated White Paper on the Massachusetts Libertarian Movement ($1) prepared by the Center for the Study of Social Systems (PO Box 920, Boston, MA 02103). I hope this document will serve as a guide to other studies for other parts of the country. Only when we systematically analyze the problems and issues in the light of our principles, assess our true strength, and then develop ways to allocate our resources accordingly can we hope to move from the role of parlor philosophers to significant agents of social change. This brilliant document surely leads the way.

• The Minnesota Libertarian Society (1985 Selby Avenue, Saint Paul, MN 55102) is a loose-knit group of philosophical libertarians formed as a strictly educational group. The Society has published several papers and has cosponsored a forum on "Energy, Economy and the Environment" in conjunction with the University of Minnesota Libertarian Club. I hope this group will serve as a model for other groups around the country. We really need off-campus, yet educationally oriented, groups through which nonstudents and nonacademics can gather to discuss libertarian issues and advance the cause of liberty. For more information write to Michael E. Coughlin, Secretary, MLS.

• Libertarian Advocate (1224 National Press Building, Washington, DC 20045) is a libertarian lobby. Director Alan W. Bock plans to actively promote libertarian legislative programs in Congress and in state legislatures, the media, and to the general public. Libertarian Advocate is pushing for the abolition of all regulatory commissions and agencies. It is also lobbying for the abolition of inheritance and gift taxes, but seems only to want to move from a progressive to a flat income tax. For more information write to Alan Bock.

• John B. Egger, formerly of the University of Dallas, has just taken a position at Goucher College in the Baltimore area. John is an Austro-libertarian and will be teaching in the Department of Economics.

• Ralph Raico, who teaches in the Department of History at SUNY, Buffalo, is one of libertarianism's most perceptive and best writers. See his Gay Rights: A Libertarian Approach ($.25) from the Libertarian Party, 1516 P Street, NW, Washington, DC 20005). This is one of the best presentations of individual rights I have ever seen. Another top-notch Raico piece is "Thomas Szasz and the Age of Psychiatry" (The Alternative, May 1976, PO Box 877, Bloomington, IN 47401).

• New York University's Graduate Department of Economics has truly become the world's most important center of Austrian economics. Austrian luminaries Israel M. Kirzner and Ludwig M. Lachmann will be joined in the fall by post-doctoral fellow Mario Rizzo (a recent PhD recipient at the University of Chicago, but a staunch Austrian in spite of it). Rizzo will be both teaching and researching. His research project is one that should excite all libertarians: a study of the relation between the development of the common law and the rise of the Hayekian "spontaneous order" market system. In addition to the arrival of Rizzo, at least five new doctoral candidates will be transferring to NYU.

Perhaps the project with the most immediate potential at NYU is the monthly Austrian Economics Seminar (organized and directed by Austro-libertarian Walter Block of Rutgers University). The AES is a high-level seminar/workshop devoted to developing new inquiries by Austrian economists. The seminar has been meeting monthly since December 1975. The official members and participants include: Walter Block, John Egger, Israel Kirzner, Ludwig Lachmann, Donald Lavoie, Mario Rizzo, Murray Rothbard, Joseph Salerno, Louis Spadaro, and Arthur Zabarkas. Roy A. Childs serves as secretary. The seminar's membership will be expanded to accommodate the incoming NYU Austrian graduate fellows. In addition to papers given by several of AES members, papers have been delivered by two visitors: Robert Nozick of Harvard University's Philosophy Department and Lawrence H. White, a brilliant undergraduate student at Harvard. ■

James Joyce), superb in his insights into human nature, and so powerful in his impact that he leaves one emotionally drained; he is also, without being didactic, a great moralist—would that there were someone of his caliber writing today! Hardy is also a superb atmosphere-builder and novelistic craftsman, and his Jude the Obscure and Return of the Native in particular are powerful and devastating. If a hitherto unpublished novel of either of them were to be discovered tomorrow, I would drop everything else, no matter how important, and devour it—that's how "unreadable" I find their works.

For prose style there is no contemporary master who seems to me to equal Isaac Dinesen. And the greatest master of prose fiction of the twentieth century seems to me to be Stefan Zweig.

JOHN HOSPERS
Los Angeles, Calif.

Riggenbach Replies

First, my assurances to Mr. Anders that I have by no means permanently abandoned Joseph Conrad and Jane Austen. My present enthusiasm for Henry James was once an anitpathy, and James' is not the only such case. Senses of life change; they expand, contract, and on occasion, actually metamorphose into something radically different from their former selves. My tastes have changed in the past; likely they will change again. But I confess it seems unlikely to me now that I will ever derive pleasure from Conrad's garrulous mutterings about an evil he never specifies (and seems never to have clearly conceived) or Austen's clever, elaborate, mincing studies in boy-meets-girl.

Again, it is possible I shall one day enjoy Henry Fielding, George Eliot, and Thomas Hardy. Dr. Hospers writes so passionately in their defense I feel already an itch to reopen Jude the Obscure. (Hospers is always persuasive in defense of the arts—see his excellent article on "Art, Philosophy Of" in the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, especially the closing paragraphs.)

But, in the end, what I am writing about in "An Introduction to Imaginative Literature" is not the works I like but the works which I consider artistically excellent. To me, an artistically excellent work is one whose every detail is necessary, in whatever degree, to the meaningfulness—the symbolic clarity—of the whole. A simpler way of saying this is that a novel which could be changed, reduced or expanded in any way without an irrevocable loss of meaning is, to that extent, not a good novel. By this standard of aesthetic value, the novels of Conrad, Austen, Fielding, Eliot and Hardy simply do not qualify for adjectives like "great." If it were purely a matter of aesthetic value (or, for that matter, purely a matter of pleasure), I wouldn't walk across the street to read a newly discovered novel by Joseph Conrad, but I would "drop everything else" in the manner described by Hospers to read a newly published work of any kind by William H. Gass.

And what standard of aesthetic value does Hospers propose? That "historians of fiction" consider a work "well-wrought"? And what works in political philosophy are considered "well-wrought" by "historians of political philosophy"? do "historians of economics" consider Human Action as "well-wrought" as The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money? If anything, professors of English (the principal "historians of fiction" in an era when the literary arts have been virtually taken over by universities) have botched their work even more horribly than professors of philosophy and professors of economics—while a majority of the most acute critics of literature are professors, the nature of the American academic system is such that, across the board, literature is unquestionably the most incompetently taught subject currently offered at universities.

Philosophical aesthetics may not be far behind, though, if Weitz, Stevenson and Nagel are taken in their critiques of Susanne Langer, as representative of academe's best. Weitz declares that "Mrs. Langer's whole theory of non-discursive symbolism seems to be rooted in her picture or mirror theory of language," a statement which, even if it were true (which it isn't) and even if it were proved true (or even argued for) by Weitz (which it isn't) wouldn't preclude the possibility (never entertained by Weitz) of the same theory of non-discursive symbolism being rooted in a different theory of language (the one sketched by Rand in her Introduction to Objectivist Epistemology, for example). Weitz goes on to announce that Langer's conception of music is rooted in a Bergsonian conception of time; and that, he declares, is "no theory at all, but an exercise in bad grammar." What follows, his argument for this view, makes his own general position quite clear: the world is made of words; the work of philosophy is to determine the meaning of words, which is to say, how they're used in different sentences; no enquiry need ever be made into what in reality the words designate. To such a mentality, the work of a Bergson or a Langer—the attempt to achieve the greatest possible clarity and precision in the use of symbols to describe the real world (which is conceived as the proper subject of philosophical thought)—must seem paradoxical and muddled indeed.

Stevenson sets out to show that the sine qua non of Langer's approach to aesthetics—the general theory of signs—is unnecessary to deal adequately with the major philosophical problems posed by works of art. He proceeds by sketching a theory in which the general theory of signs is brought back in through the back door (under an assumed name—that of "sense" as it is applied to linguistic structures). His article, thus, stands better as a confirmation of Langer's method than as a critique of it. And while Nagel's remarks on Philosophy in a New Key are somewhat more sophisticated than Weitz's and Stevenson's, they have in common a gift for misunderstanding which, at times, seems positively willful. And just why there should be such misunderstanding of Langer is profoundly unclear to me. The distinction between presentational and discursive symbolisms is, on the other hand, quite clear, and I believe it to be presented clearly and unequivocally in Langer's books. A considerably more intelligent and constructive response to Langer's theory of art may be found in Herbert Read, The Tenth Muse (New York, Grove Press, 1957).

And as for Langer's ideas "still appealing considerably to nonaestheticians," it might as easily (and as accurately) be said that Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations still appeals considerably to noneconomists. There is among too many libertarians a ready tendency to question the intellectual establishment only with respect to political and economic issues, as if the same intellectuals who advocate institutionalized theft, slavery, and murder may safely be relied upon to honor the truth about philosophy and art. In fact, they may not be. On the contrary, in my experience, the more valuable an idea is for serious students of a field, the more likely that idea is to be regarded as either "radical" or "discredited" by the intellectual establishment.

JEFF RIGGENBACH
Los Angeles, Calif.

Classified

EMPLOYMENT

MAKE MONEY at home. Details $1.00, stamped self-addressed envelope. Andy Davis, 290 Cherrywood Ave., San Leandro, CA 94577.

UNLIMITED HOME EARNINGS Stuffing Envelopes—Rush 25 cents and stamped addressed envelope to: F.J. Diehl, Box 934, Bensenville, IL 60106.

OVERSEAS POSITIONS offer high salaries, free travel. Comprehensive new "Guide to Employment Abroad" covers all occupations, 60 countries. Includes exclusive "Directory of American Companies Overseas." $2. Satisfaction guaranteed or payment refunded. Hill International Publications, PO Box 79-L, East Islip, NY 11730.

HOME WORKERS, earn $60 weekly addressing envelopes. Rush self-addressed, stamped envelope. Southern Diversified, 1206 Camden Drive, Richmond, VA 23229.

DEEPSEA EMPLOYMENT on Freighters and Tankers. Big Money. World-wide travel. Full information, $2. Deepsea, PO Box 012109, Miami, Florida 33101.

$800 MONTHLY possible doing home, co-operative mailings. Offer details, rush 25 cents and stamped, addressed envelope. R.C. Wyllie, 156 9th Ave., San Francisco, CA 94118.

EARN BIG PROFITS, $250-$1,000—stuffing envelopes. Rush stamped, self-addressed envelope to: K.L.A. Company, Box 5163, Bridgeport, CT 06610.

LIBERTARIAN LAWYER (29), admitted in NY, seeks employment on West Coast (or Southwest). Two years experience in real estate, probate, general practice. Resume on request. Libertarian Review, Box 3, 901 N. Washington St., Suite 200, Alexandria, VA 22314.

BIG MONEY! Sell Pantyhose, sox 50% under retail. Send $.50 for sample & info. Samantha, PO Box 2446, Charlotte, NC 28234.

LITERATURE

"THOMAS PAINE PORTFOLIO." Hand-some unit containing enlightening, provocative articles and memorabilia about the great libertarian. $3. Independent Publications, Box 162, Paterson, NJ 07513.

VEGETARIANISM: prescription for longevity! 4 issues annually filled with information, nutrition, medical discoveries. $2. Vegetarian Health Review & Digest, PO Box 221-L, Haverford, PA 19041.

KEEP AHEAD of the Times with "Normandy Express Newsletter." Features: Free Ads, New Items, Business and Travel Tips, World Trade Opportunities, Bargain Corner, Opportunities Unlimited, Entrepreneur Corner plus much more. Sample $3. Normandy Express Enterprises, Box 1154, Station A, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5W 1G6.

GET RICH with "NORMANDY EXPRESS NEWSLETTER." Sample, $3. Normandy Express Enterprises, Box 1154, Station A, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5W 1G6.

THE ICONOCLASTIC REPORT, a publication of news, satire, and commentary specializing in subjects avoided by other libertarian publications. Three issues for $1, or $.50 and three stamped self-addressed envelopes. Ron Chusid, 848 Tappan, No. 7, Ann Arbor, MI 48104.

INDIANS! North, South America. Out of print books. Free catalog. Bob Fein, 139 Joralemon St., Brooklyn, NY 11201.

SOLAR ENERGY Handbook, 4th edition, $9. Ficoa-LR, 2901 S. Wentworth, Milwaukee, WI 53207. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

SAVE UP TO 83%! How to! Informational! General books! All at bargain prices. Catalog Free! Corn, 1317 Third Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90019.

LISTEN TO THE WOMEN FOR A CHANGE, compiled by Kay Camp. 50 World Feminists speak out; biographies, photos. 50 pages. $3. 10 or more, $2 each. WILPF, 1213 Race, Philadelphia, PA 19107.

JOHN B. CONNALLY is the candidate you are looking for—if you still think the amount of freedom left in America is too much. Send $1 for "Meet John Connally" and learn about his program for America, which includes compulsory national service for all 18-year-olds. Connally Information Committee, Concord, VT 05824.

IS IT TOO LATE? Can capitalism survive? Capitalism in a Changing World analyzes causes of impending breakdown of capitalism and action needed for its survival. The author, Rex Dye, believes economic laws under which capitalism must operate have been violated and unless action to bring conformity with these laws is taken, world-wide breakdown of the system is inevitable. Critical comment by recognized economists, politicians, and businessmen in appendix. A "must" for economic and social thinkers! $9.50 postpaid. Economic Research, 23587 Novi Road, Northville, MI 48167.

DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTS bring war—read how and why in A PARTY OF WAR AND TREASON by Benjamin J. Waldeck. $1.95 Guaranteed. Coriolanus Publisher, Dept. L, Box 577, Redondo Beach, CA 90277.

FREE LIST of used libertarian hardcovers. Anarchism, Atheism, revisionism, Nock, Mencken, Spencer included. Books from Bill, 251 Baldwin Ave., Meriden, CT 06450.

BOOKS FOR LIBERTARIANS: Gordon Clark, Philosophy of Science and Belief in God, $1.95; Historiography: Secular and Religious, $7.50; Religion, Reason, and Revelation, $2.95; Three Types of Religious Philosophy, $3.75. John Robbins, Answer to Ayn Rand, $4.95. Discounts: $10-$25=10%; $25-$50=20%; $50+=30%. John Robbins, PO Box 4028, Arlington, VA 22204.

MISCELLANY

BECOME LEGALLY ordained minister. Credentials sent for $3 offering: Mother Earth Church, Dept. LR, 469 Pacific, Monterey, CA 93940.

HOME STUDY course in economics. A 10-lesson study that will throw light on today's baffling problems. Tuition free, small charge for materials. Write to Henry George Institute, 55 W. 42nd St., New York, NY 10036.

FIRECRACKER MATERIAL available, often locally. GUN CONTROL worthless; criminals can make guns from pipe, matches, etc. Information $2. Sanford, Box 41003-LR, Washington, DC 20014.

MILLIONS WON IN FEDERAL OIL Drawings supervised by US Government. Free Brochure: Research, Box 27571, Phoenix, AZ 85061.

EARN COLLEGE degrees at home. Many subjects. Florida State Christian University, Post Office Box 14576, Ft. Lauderdale, FL 33302.

TRADE SECRET $1,000,000 Business Builder! Fabulous vacation premiums boost sales immediately, up to 900%! Low cost, self-liquidating. Special powerhouse kit offer. Write Holiday Business Incentives, 1311-A Berkshire, Austin, TX 78723.

THE MAGIC Key to Wealth. Ageless, proven method. Obtain anything you desire. Send $3 cash. POB 20, Cromwell, CT 06416.

CAKE SECRETS: A complete description of what they are. Free purse-a-lette with order. $2 ppd. Meriam Products, 9505 Laverne, Skokie, IL 60076.

START SAVING every seventh paycheck. I'll show you an easy way for only $1. Thomas L. Tobin, Monticello, IL 61856.

HAVE OODLES of old inactive stock certificates for sale at $3 per certificate. (Collectors items) Write: Trader Joe, 214 N.W. 4th St., Fairbault, Minn. 55021.

CUT HEATING COST. The fuel saver manual shows you how with simple household tools. Just mail $2 to Lifetime, PO Box 1561, Smyrna, GA 30061.

NOTICE: Our $10 Sure Cure Brochure concerning War, Women, Inflation and Religion ($1 value) will, beginning July 4, 1976 be $100 ($10 value). Send checks to: Century Apex, 1615 Belmont Ave., Youngstown, OH 44504.

SOCIALISM, CAPITALISM, COMMUNISM, Anarchism! Like peas in a pod! Losers! Full explanation—No winners! Ten Dollars $10. (One dollar value). Century Apex, 1615 Belmont Avenue, Youngstown, Ohio 44504.

NEED NEW ID? Change name/age with State ID cards, birth certificates, official ID! Details $.25. Eden Press, Box 8410-LR, Fountain Valley, CA 92708.

WITCHCRAFT CORRESPONDENCE COURSES. Our traditions hold many arcane keys to western occultism. You can benefit by studying these ways to enlightenment and power. Information, Serenity Guide and protective Pentacle $1. WICCA, R2, Salem, MO 65560.

CINCINNATI is a funny name for a nice town with chili dishes all its own. Recipes $1. Johnson, Box 272-B, Mason, OH 45040.

RELIGION: Any life after death is better than nothing—even this one, for explanation send $1 to HEREBEFORES, Box 2138, Youngstown, OH 44504.

MUSIC GUARANTEED. Self instructions how to play 35 popular music instruments. $6.75 ppd. A.L.G. Music Publishing, 4025 St. Martin, Cincinnati, OH 45211.

PERSONALS

Third Year Libertarian Medical Student seeks private sources of financial aid to continue education. Will not accept government funds. Deferred interest plan preferred. References provided. Write Box 1151, Loma Linda, CA 92354.

PRIMITIVE Libertarian bachelor seeks a quiet, slender woman who is spirited and wholesome. Should enjoy chamber music, the countryside, and children. I am an informal and understanding Ph.D. scientist/engineer. Accurate social resume by return mail to a third party of your choosing completely protects your response. Libertarian Review, Box 2, 901 N. Washington St., Suite 200, Alexandria, VA 22314.

PRODUCTS

FREE—Green Thumb. To introduce you to my private formula for house plant nutrition, send a SASE and $.25 for handling to Jack's Packs, PO Box 421, Auburndale, FL 33823. I will send you a $.50 packet (one month supply for up to 16 house plants) of packaged "Green Thumb." Use it and see your house plants come alive and smile. It will amaze you. Also, get free, "Tips on how to get your house plants to smile."

ABANDONED INDUSTRIAL SILVER worth $5.17 an ounce—yours for taking! No detectors or digging; found in every city, town, hamlet. Free information: Silverman 85, Box 548, Woodville, TX 75979.

FOOL BURGLARS. They fear burglar alarms. Put our "Warning — Electronic Alarms" labels on your doors. 3 for $1. Don's, Box 3637, Charlotte, NC 28203.

"DON'T RE-ELECT ANYBODY!" Bumper-sticker or Button. $1 each, postpaid. H-G Enterprises, Dept. L, Clarklake, MI 49234.

GRAVITY CONTROLLED: Wireless Transmission of Electrical Energy. Compress 150 KW out of 100 KW outlet. Small Input, Large Output. Send $3. for Copy: World Federation Science Engineering, 5842 "J" McFadden, Huntington Beach, CA 92649.

REPAIR CASSETTES EASILY YOURSELF. $1.00 Whiting, 14324 Chadron, Hawthorn, CA 90250.

HOT BREAD. Build Authentic French Canadian Clay Oven. Local raw materials. Fun, profits. Backyard, summer camp, roadside. Illustrated Booklet $3. Clay Oven, 49 Legardeur L, Baie-Comeau, Quebec, CANADA.

BOOKS PRINTED from manuscript. Biography Press, Route 1-745, Aransas Pass, TX 78336.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS are accepted at the discretion of the publisher. Rates: 10 cents per word (minimum $2). For U.S. box number, $1. Full payment must accompany order. Address: Classified Department, Libertarian Review, 901 N. Washington St., Alexandria, Virginia 22314. Replies to LR box numbers should be sent to the above address.

RUBBER STAMPS. All Styles. 3-line name and address stamp with astrology sign, flag or happy face $3.50. Name and address only $2.50. Literature on request. Dealers inquiries invited. Johnston Linotype Service, Dept. 20, 7250 Angela Ave., Canoga Park, CA 91370.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE and property. Complete automatic fire alarm system for only $5.95. For more information write to Frank Ward, PO Box 752, Boulder City, NV 89005.

STOP! Needless tensions and worries from controlling your life. Modern technique will help rid you of draining pressures. Send only $2.25 to C.A.P., Dept. L, Box 55, Derby Line, VT 05830. Moneyback guarantee if not totally satisfied.

YOU CAN HAVE a more attractive face! Complete new face course $4. Satisfaction guaranteed! Mitchell's of Kentucky (Dept. LR), 1533 Bailey Street, Henderson, Kentucky 42420.

STOP TREATING YOUR ILLS, get rid of them easily, safely, without drugs. Arthritis, diabetes, even cancer can be cured. Read actual case histories by recognized doctors. Send $2 to Health, 5101 Monterey Rd. No. 3071, San Jose, CA 95111.

RUBBER STAMPS— 3-lines, $1.50 ($2.50 additional line); Signature, $4.50; Bank Deposit, $1.50; c.w.o. FMS, Box 2319-L, Lancaster, CA 93534.

NIXON'S VERSION OF WATERGATE—as it unfolded, in his own words. Recorded live from TV. broadcasts. 100 minutes on cassette tape, $9.95. Limited Edition, 226 Banbury Road, Columbia, SC 29210.

WANT MORE MONEY, BETTER JOB? Get valid college degrees by mail, without studying. . . legally! Bachelors, Masters, Ph.D., H.S. Diplomas—Revealing details FREE. Counseling, Box 389-LR1, Tustin, CA 92680.

MATCHBOOK COVERS. Worldwide selection. Membership, $1. Matchbooks International, LR2, Box 1168, Upland, CA 91786.

AGING FACE? Sagging chin? Protruding tummy? Reverse the law of gravity. $3. SASE. Verna, Box 2445, Hot Springs, Arkansas 71901.

POEM—"Glory of God," framed 8½ x 11. $5.95 plus $.50 handling. McClellan, 703 N.W. 14th Ave., Gainesville, Florida 32601.

PROTECT YOUR ALBUMS. White cardboard replacement jackets $.35. Gray plastic lined inner sleeves $.15. Postage $1.25. Record boxes and 78 sleeves available. CABCO LM, Box 8212, Columbus, OH 43201.

YOUR COAT OF ARMS researched, color drawing with reference. Send name, originating country, and $2.75 to Stott Crest, 9916 90th Ave., N.W., Gig Harbor, WA 98335.

BEAUTIFUL HAWAIIAN SHIRTS. 100% Cotton, short sleeves. Small to XL $9.95 each plus COD fee. Available in Blue, Green, Brown, Orange & Red. Marukiyoya, 188 North King Street, Honolulu, HI 96817. No catalogs.

SERVICES

LET ME TRACK down that out-of-print book for you. Edwin Tobin, 525 N. Laurel Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90048.

WRITERS — "UNSALABLE" MANUSCRIPT? Try AUTHOR AID ASSOCIATES, 340 East 52nd Street, Dept. LR, New York, NY 10022.

DIVORCE IN 24 HOURS Mutual or contested actions, low cost, Haiti or Dominican Republic. For information, send $2. for 24-page booklet to: Dr. von Gihman, ODA, PO Box 5, Hyattsville, Maryland 20781, USA. Tel.: (301) 559-2342. Worldwide service.

OUT OF PRINT Bookfinders: Vantreuren, 1950 Post 108LR, San Francisco, CA 94115. Send wants or send stamps for catalog.

AS WE GO MARCHING by John T. Flynn	$3.45
TOWARD A PLANNED SOCIETY by Otis Graham	$11.95
AMERICA'S EMERGING FASCIST ECONOMY by Charlotte Twhight	$12.95
DEFENDING THE UNDEFENDABLE by Walter Block	$9.95
FREE MARKET ECONOMICS: A SYLLABUS by Bettina Bien Greaves
FREE MARKET ECONOMICS: A READER	each $6.00 set $10.00
BAMBI by Felix Salten	$5.95
THE THIRD INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION by G. Harry Stine	$7.95
THE HEALING FACTOR: Vitamin C Against Disease by Irwin	$1.95
LIVING WITH EQUALS by Jerry Klasman	$6.95
MIND: AN ESSAY ON HUMAN FEELING, Vol. 1 & 2 by Langer	set $7.90
ANDERSEN'S FAIRY TALES translated by Lucas & Paull	$3.95

NEW ADDITIONS
CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY, Vol. 3:		- July -
Advance to Revolution: 1760-1775	by Murray Rothbard	$11.95
COLLECTIVIST ECONOMIC PLANNING	edited by F.A. Hayek	$12.50
MONETARY THEORY & THE TRADE CYCLE	by F.A. Hayek	$11.50
PROFITS, INTERESTS & INVESTMENTS	by F.A. Hayek	$12.50
MONETARY NATIONALISM & INTERNATIONAL STABILITY	by F.A. Hayek	$7.50
THE WINTER OF THE WORLD	by Poul Anderson	$1.50
THE ECONOMICS OF LUDWIG VON MISES	edited by Laurence S. Mass	$3.95

Action, H.B., THE MORALS OF MARKETS, $6.00
 Action, Lord, ESSAYS ON FREEDOM & POWER, $6.50
 Arendt, THE ORIGINS OF TOTALITARIANISM, $4.95
 Bastiat, THE LAW, $1
 Boetie, THE POLITICS OF OBEDIENCE, $2.95
 Bresler, IDEOLOGY OF THE EXECUTIVE STATE, $.75
 Buchanan, THE LIMITS OF LIBERTY, $12.50
 Campus Studies Institute, THE INCREDIBLE BREAD MACHINE, $1.95
 Carneiro, A THEORY OF THE ORIGIN OF THE STATE, $.75
 Chodorov, THE INCOME TAX: ROOT OF ALL EVIL, $4.95
 Cornuelle, DE-MANAGING AMERICA, $.75
 Friedman, D., LAISSEZ FAIRE IN POPULATION: THE LEAST BAD SOLUTION, $2.25
 Hayek, THE CONSTITUTION OF LIBERTY, $3.95
 Hayek, KINDS OF ORDER IN SOCIETY, $.75
 Hayek, LAW, LEGISLATION & LIBERTY, $8.50
 Hess, DEAR AMERICA, $.75
 Hess, THE DEATH OF POLITICS, $.50
 Hess, THE LAWLESS STATE, $.40
 Hess & Morris, NEIGHBORHOOD POWER, $.345
 Hospers, LIBERTARIANISM, $10/$2.95
 Humboldt, THE LIMITS OF STATE ACTION, $10.95
 Jouvanel, ON POWER, $2.95
 LeFevre, THE LIBERTARIAN, $1
 LeFevre, THE NATURE OF MAN & HIS GOVT., $1.50
 LeFevre, THE PHILOSOPHY OF OWNERSHIP, $2.50
 Kotler, NEIGHBORHOOD GOVERNMENT, $2.95
 Lane, THE DISCOVERY OF FREEDOM, $.3
 MacBride (ed.), THE LADY & THE TYCOON, $.95
 Machan, HUMAN RIGHTS & HUMAN LIBERTIES, $11.95
 Machan (ed.), THE LIBERTARIAN ALTERNATIVE, $12.50
 Mises, BUREAUCRACY, $.6
 Mises, OMNIPOTENT GOVERNMENT, $.8
 Nisbet, THE TWILIGHT OF AUTHORITY, $10.95
 Nock, OUR ENEMY, THE STATE, $2.95
 Nozick, ANARCHY, STATE & UTOPIA, $12.95
 Oppenheimer, THE STATE, $.395
 Paterson, THE GOD OF THE MACHINE, $.495
 Perkins, RATIONAL ANARCHY, $.395
 Rothbard, EGALITARIANISM AS A REVOLT AGAINST NATURE, $2.50
 Rothbard, FOR A NEW LIBERTY, $.85
 Spencer, THE MAN VS. THE STATE, $.30
 Spencer, SOCIAL STATICS, $.6
 Spooner, NO TREASON: THE CONSTITUTION OF NO AUTHORITY, $1
 Spooner, THE UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAWS OF CONGRESS PROHIBITING PRIVATE MAILS, $.75
 Sumner, WHAT SOCIAL CLASSES OWE EACH OTHER, $.2
 Taylor, FREEDOM, ANARCHY & THE LAW, $.35
 Tucker, STATE SOCIALISM & ANARCHISM, $.1
 Tullock, THE LOGIC OF THE LAW, $.85

Ashton, THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION, $1.95
 Alchian & Allen, UNIVERSITY ECONOMICS, $13.95
 Armentano, THE MYTHS OF ANTITRUST, $11.95
 Bakewell, INFLATION IN THE U.S., $1
 Bastiat, ECONOMIC HARMONIES, $5
 Bastiat, ECONOMIC SOPHISMS, $3
 Bastiat, SELECTED ESSAYS ON POLITICAL ECONOMY, $3
 Bauer, DISSSENT OF DEVELOPMENT, $16.50
 Becker, THE ECONOMICS OF DISCRIMINATION, $2.95
 Blumenfeld (ed.), PROPERTY IN A HUMANE ECONOMY, $4.95
 Bohm-Bawerk, CAPITAL & INTEREST, $18.75 (1 vol.)
 Bohm-Bawerk, SHORTER CLASSICS, $10
 Bohm-Bawerk, VALUE & PRICE, $4
 Brozen, THE COMPETITIVE ECONOMY, $12.95
 Brozen, ADVERTISING & SOCIETY, $8.95
 Buchanan & Tullock, THEORY OF PUBLIC CHOICE, $15
 Davis, THE WORLD BETWEEN THE WARS, 1919-1939: An Economist's View, $16
 Dolan, TANSTAAFL, $3.95
 Fleming, 10,000 COMMANDMENTS, $10
 F.E.E., CLICHES OF SOCIALISM, $2
 Friedman, CAPITALISM & FREEDOM, $2.95
 Friedman, COUNTER-REVOLUTION IN MONETARY THEORY, $2.50
 Friedman, DOLLARS & DEFICITS, $7.50
 Friedman, ESSAYS IN POSITIVE ECONOMICS, $3.95
 Friedman (ed.) STUDIES IN QUAN. THEORY OF MONEY, $3.25
 Friedman, THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS A FREE LUNCH, $3.95
 Friedman & Heller, MONETARY VS. FISCAL POLICY, $1.65
 Friedman & Schwartz, MONETARY HISTORY OF THE U.S., $6.95
 Furuboth & Svetozar (eds.), ECONOMICS OF PROPERTY RIGHTS, $7.95
 George, PROGRESS & POVERTY, $5
 Gordon (ed.), MILTON FRIEDMAN'S MONETARY FRAMEWORK, $3.50
 Greaves, MISES MADE EASIER, $6
 Greaves, UNDERSTANDING THE DOLLAR CRISIS, $7
 Harper, DEFENDING PRIVATE PROPERTY: INFLATION & DEVALUATION, $ 75
 Harper, WHY WAGES RISE, $1.50
 Hayek, CHOICE IN CURRENCY, $3.25
 Hayek, ECON. FREEDOM & REPRE. GOVT., $2.50
 Hayek, INDIVIDUALISM & ECONOMIC ORDER, $1.95
 Hayek, THE INTELLECTUALS & SOCIALISM, $ 75
 Hayek, THE ROAD TO SERFDOM, $8.00/$3.25
 Hayek, STUDIES IN POLITICS, PHILOSOPHY & ECON., $2.95
 Hayek, A TIGER BY THE TAIL, $4.75
 Hazlitt, THE CONQUEST OF POVERTY, $8.95
 Hazlitt, ECONOMICS IN ONE LESSON, $1.50
 Hazlitt, FAILURE OF THE "NEW ECONOMICS" $11.95
 Hazlitt, WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT INFLATION, $2.25
 Hicks, CAPITAL & TIME, $10
 Hutt, POLITICALLY IMPOSSIBLE, $3.75
 Hutt, A REHABILITATION OF SAY'S LAW, $8
 Kirzner, COMPETITION & ENTREPRENEURSHIP, $8.50

Allen, NONE DARE CALL IT CONSPIRACY, $.50
Bailyn, THE IDEOL. ORIGINS OF THE AMER. REVOL., $3.50
Barnes, BLASTING THE HISTORICAL BLACKOUT, $1.50
Barnes, IN QUEST OF TRUTH & JUSTICE, $.25
Barnes, PEARL HARBOR AFTER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, $.7
Barnes, PERPETUAL WAR FOR PERPET. PEACE, $.22.50
Barnes, SELECTED REVISIONIST PAMPHLETS, $14
Barnet & Muller, GLOBAL REACH, $.45
Bourne, WAR & THE INTELLECTUALS, $.25
Canfield & Weberman, COUP D'ETAT IN AMERICA, $11.95
Caro, THE POWER BROKER, $.75
Colby, TWAS A FAMOUS VICTORY, $.75
Cote, CHARLES A. LINDBERGH AND THE BATTLE AGAINST AMERICAN INTERVENTION IN W.W. II, $10
Domhoff, THE BOHEMIAN GROVE & OTHER RETREATS, $.245
Ekirch, THE DECLINE OF AMERICAN LIBERALISM, $.35
Ekirch, IDEOLOGIES & UTOPIAS, $.25
Ekirch, PROGRESSIVISM IN AMERICA, $.45
Epstein, OPERATION KEELHAUL, $.85
Flynn, AS WE GO MARCHING, $.345
Flynn, WHILE YOU SLEPT, $.1
Knollenberg, GROWTH OF THE AMER. REVOLUTION, $15
Kolko, RAILROADS & REGULATIONS, $.25
Lundberg, THE ROCKEFELLER SYNDROME, $.12.50
Malone, STORY OF THE DECLAR. OF INDEPENDENCE, $15
Martin, AMERICAN LIBERALISM & WORLD POL., $.22.50
Martin, MEN AGAINST THE STATE, $.25
Martin, REVISIONIST VIEWPOINTS, $.25
Melman, THE PERMANENT WAR ECONOMY, $.45
Radosh, PROPHETS ON THE RIGHT, $.95
Radosh & Rothbard, A NEW HIST. OF LEVIATHAN, $.345
Rothbard, CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY, VOL. 1, $15
Rothbard, CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY, VOL. 2, $12.95

Bramble, DEPRESSION-INFLATION SURVIV. MANUAL, $1
Bowers, HIGH PROFITS FROM RARE COIN INVESTMENT
$3.95
Browne, HOW YOU CAN PROFIT FROM THE COMING
DEVALUATION, $1.75
Browne, YOU CAN PROFIT FROM A MONETARY CRISIS, $2.25
Carabini, EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW NOW ABOUT
GOLD & SILVER, $8.95
Curley, THE COMING PROFIT IN GOLD, $1.95
Dines, THE INVISIBLE CRASH, $1.95
Fehrenbach, THE SWISS BANKS, $7.95
Green, HOW TO BUY GOLD, $3.95
Green, THE WORLD OF GOLD TODAY (revised), $8.95
Groseclose, FIFTY YEARS OF MANAGED MONEY: THE STORY OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE, $9.50
Hoppe, HOW TO INVEST IN GOLD COINS, $2.95
Hoppe, HOW TO INVEST IN GOLD STOCKS & AVOID THE PITFALLS, $9.95

Ashley, COCAINE, $1.95
Brecher (ed.), LICIT & ILLICIT DRUGS, $4.95
Culbert, VITAMIN B 17, $8.95
"Diogenes," THE APRIL GAME, $1.50
Efron, HOW CBS TRIED TO KILL A BOOK, $1.50
Efron, THE NEWS TWISTERS, $1.25
Farmer, UNREADY KILOWATTS, $15
McKay, EXTRAORDINARY POPULAR DELUSIONS & THE MADNESS OF CROWDS, $5.95
Mencken, A GANG OF PECKSNIFFS and Other Comments on Newspaper Publishers, Editors & Reporters, $8.95
Mencken, MENCKEN CHRESTOMATHY, $15
Mencken, PREJUDICES, $2.95
Mencken, THE VINTAGE MENCKEN, $2.45
Nock, COGITATIONS, $1
Nock, MEMOIRS OF A SUPERFLUOUS MAN, $2.85
Nock, JEFFERSON, $2.95
Nock, THEORY OF EDUCATION IN THE U.S., $10
O'Hair, FREEDOM UNDER SIEGE, $8.95
Rothbard (ed.), THE LIBERTARIAN FORUM (bound), $11
Rothbard, et. al (eds.), LEFT AND RIGHT: SELECTED ESSAYS
$7.00
Tucille, IT USUALLY BEGINS WITH AYN RAND, $2.95
Tucille, WHO'S AFRAID OF 1984?, $7.95

POSTAGE—Within U.S.: Add 75¢ for postage and handling on all orders. Outside U.S.: Add 75¢ or 10¢ per book whichever is greater
New York State residents add appropriate sales tax
Send your order to LAISSEZ FAIRE BOOKS,
Dept. LR-7, 206 Mercer St., New York, N.Y. 10012. TOTAL

CASSETTES For Libertarians

LIBERTARIANISM

- Childs & Kirzner, Value and the Social Sciences Tape 385 (97 min) $12.50
- Chodorov, Debunking Defenders of the State/Tape 197 (57 min) $9.95
- Chodorov, Rotarian Socialism/Tape 198 (58 min) $9.95
- Crane, Libertarian Party Principles/Tape 339 (26 min) $8.95
- Grinder, R.D. & Baumgarth, Authority and Intellectuals/Tape 384 (67 min) $10.50
- Hagel & Grinder, W., Libertarian Class Analysis/Tape 386 (71 min) $10.50
- Hess, K., What Happened to Conservatism?/Tape 319 (58 min) $9.95
- Hospers, The Libertarian Temperament/Tape 200 (50 min) $9.95
- Hospers, The Life and Death of New York City Tape 225 (56 min) $9.95
- Hospers, Politics of Liberty/Tape 220 (82 min) $10.95
- Hospers, To Keep Time With/Tape 233 (82 min) $10.95
- Hospers & Childs, Debate with Socialist Workers Party/Tape 186, 2 tapes (132 min) $20.90
- Kalcheim, Enemy of the State/Tape 404 (31 min) $9.95
- Lefevre, Coming Alive/Tape 403 (74 min) $10.50
- Lefevre, Law, Legislation, and Rights/Tape 405 (88 min) $10.95
- Lefevre & Smith, The Ethics of Egoism/Tape 337 (83 min) $10.95
- Liggio, Early French Libertarian Thought/Tape 383 (81 min) $10.95
- MacBride, Press Conference/Tape 389 (25 min) $8.95
- Machan, Utopianism—Left and Right/Tape 203 (56 min) $9.95
- Rothbard, The Future of Libertarianism/Tape 216 (85 min) $10.95
- Rothbard & Peden, Libertarianism in American History/Tape 387 (88 min) $10.95
- Tuccille, Libertarianism and the Future/Tape

ECONOMICS

- Bleiberg & Kristol, The Future of Corporations/Tape 279 (109 min) $12.50
- Greaves, Monetary History of the 1929 Depression/Tape 154, 2 tapes (146 min) $20.90
- Greaves, The Nature of Economics and the Theory of Value/Tape 153 (89 min) $10.95
- Hayek, U.S. Policy Guarantees Inflation/Tape 300 (37 min) $9.95
- Hospers, Value in General, Monetary Value in Particular/Tape 251 (60 min) $10.50
- Meiselman & Davenport, The Future of Free Enterprise/Tape 280 (48 min) $9.95
- Mises, Why Socialism Always Fails/Tape 155 (86 min) $10.95
- Rothbard, Basic Principles of Free Market Economics/Tapes 301-316 (16 hrs) $160
- Rothbard, The Case For New York City Default/Tape 236 (31 min) $9.95
- Rothbard, Economic Determinism And The Conspiratorial Theory of History/Tape 211 (145 min) $20.90
- Rothbard, The Rise of Big Business: The Failure of Trusts & Cartels/Tape 212 (110 min) $15
- Rothbard, The Inflationary Boom of the 1920's/Tape 214 (132 min) $20.90
- Rothbard, What Will Be the Next Economic Crisis/Tape 360 (52 min) $9.95
- Sennholz, Inflation Morality and How It Affects You/Tape 277 (5½ hrs) $32
- Shenoy, Inflation and the Role of Capital/Tape 340 (61 min) $10.50
- Wollstein, The Myth of Monopoly Power/Tape 264 (32 min) $9.95

INVESTMENT

- Abraham, Guidelines for the Independent Investor/Tape 407 (44 min) $9.95
- Abraham, Interview with Larry Abraham/Tape 412 (81 min) $10.95
- Abraham, North & Sennholz, 1975 San Juan (Washington) Investors Conference/Tapes 396-98 (10½ hrs) Entire set $77.50
- Blanchard, Schultz, Hoppe, Holzer, et al., 1975 New Orleans Conference/Tapes 361-382 (22 hrs) $150
- Buckstein, Interview with Steve Buckstein/Tape 416 (50 min) $9.95
- Casey, Dawson, Lawlor, Financial Security for the Seventies/Tape 265 (116 min) $25
- Cawdrey, Easton, McKeever, Smith & Stevens, Wealth Protection Seminar/Tape 270 (7 hrs) $60
- Holt, Thomas Holt Investment Seminar/Tape 269 (4½ hrs) $75
- Kendall, Gold Standard Trade & Banking/Tape 317 (25 min) $8.95
- Konkin, Apres le Deluge—Vous!/Tape 401 (51 min) $9.95
- McFalls, Interview with John McFalls/Tape 414 (67 min) $10.50
- McKeever, Interview with James McKeever/Tape 411 (86 min) $10.95
- Parks, Interview with Sam Parks/Tape 415 (71 min) $10.50
- Schultz, Dines, Sinclair, Einstein & Guild, 1975 Bermuda Investors Workshop/Tapes 391-95 (5 hrs) $45
- Sennholz, Inflation Morality and How It Affects You/Tape 277 (5½ hrs) $32
- Smith, Interview with Jerome Smith/Tape 413 (85 min) $10.95
- Snyder, Rothbard, et al., International Money-line Seminar/Tapes 291-299 (10 hrs) $135
- Turner, The Coming Mideast War & Business/Tape 402 (57 min) $9.95

OBJECTIVISM

- Branden, Basic Principles of Objectivism/Tapes 561-580, 20 tapes (24 hrs) $180
- Branden, Introduction to Objectivism/Tape 560 (88 min) $10.95
- Kiefer, Objectivism and Theism: A Reply to Branden's Lecture "The Concept of God"/Tape 239 (168 min) $21.90

PSYCHOLOGY

- Branden, Basic Relaxation and Ego-Strengthening Program/Tape 599 (25 min) $10
- Branden, The Psychology of Romantic Love/Tapes 601-616 (19 hrs) $144
- Branden, Alienation/Tape 552 (51 min) $9.95
- Branden, Dealing with the Gifted Child/Tape 555 (47 min) $9.95
- Branden, Discovering the Unknown Self/Tape 550 (91 min) $15
- Branden, Exercise in Self-Discovery/Tape 541 (43 min) $9.95
- Branden, An Informal Discussion of Biocentric Therapy/Tape 556 (70 min) $10.50
- Branden, Man-Woman Relationships: Discussions with Men/Tapes 534-35 (84 min) $20; Discussions with Women/Tapes 536-39 (157 min) $40; both sets available for $50
- Branden, The Psychology of Pleasure and Social Metaphysics/Tape 553 (47 min) $9.95
- Branden, Psychotherapy and the Objectivist Ethics/Tape 551 (72 min) $10.50

- Branden, Teenagers' Questions on Sex/Tape 554 (47 min) $9.95
- Branden, Victimless Crimes/Tape 206 (58 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Self-Esteem/Tape 802 (88 min) $17
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses the Psychology of Sex/Tape 803 (43 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Free Will and Genetics/Tape 804 (37 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Independence/Tape 805 (44 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Problems of Marriage/Tape 806 (43 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Psychotherapy/Tape 808 (178 min) $34
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Objectivism/Tape 809 (175 min) $34
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses the Nature of Intelligence/Tape 810 (45 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Psychology/Tape 812 (8 hrs) $90
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses the Nature of Friendship/Tape 813 (44 min) $9.95
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Reason and Emotion/Tape 814 (79 min) $17
- Branden, Nathaniel Branden Discusses Art and Aesthetics/Tape 816 (78 min) $17
- Breggin, Raising Free and Happy Children/Tape 390 (62 min) $10.50
- Breggin, Libertarian Foundations for Personal Conduct & Happiness/Tape 267 (71 min) $10.50
- Breggin, Psychology & the Free Market/Tape 334 (43 min) $9.95
- Breggin, The Politics of Psychosurgery/Tape 192 (53 min) $9.95
- Breggin, Psychosurgery, Psychiatry and Nazism/Tape 199 (86 min) $10.95
- Breggin, Psychiatric Oppression and Personal Liberation/Tape 191 (52 min) $9.95

MISCELLANEOUS

- Armentano, Government Sanction of the Oil Cartel/Tape 224 (53 min) $9.95
- Branden, B., The Principles of Efficient Thinking/Tapes 701-710 (15 hrs) $105
- Branden, The Concept of God/Tape 564 (88 min) $10.95
- Childs, Legalizing Hard Drugs/Tape 336 (40 min) $9.95
- Efron, The News Twisters and Network News Coverage of Political Violence/Tape 180 (49 min) $9.95
- Greaves, The True Story of Pearl Harbor/Tape 156, 2 tapes (143 min) $20.90
- Hazlitt, Thinking As a Science/Tape 130 (89 min) $10.95
- Lambro, Where to Cut Federal Waste/Tape 338 (44 min) $9.95
- Mencken, An Interview with H.L. Mencken/Tape 175 (57 min) $9.95
- Rothbard, The Old Right and The New/Tape 157 (42 min) $9.95
- Rothbard, Liggio, Grinder, Block, Davidson, Testimonial Dinner Honoring Murray N. Rothbard/Tape 194, 2 tapes (106 min) $15
- Shenfield, Consumerism: A Reply to Nader and His Raiders/Tape 320 (116 min) $12.50

AF136

TO ORDER: Clip this ad and circle tapes. Enclose payment or charge to your American Express, Bank Americard or Master Charge account (include card name, number, expiration date and signature). UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE: Full refund within three weeks if not fully satisfied.

901 N. Washington Street

AUDIO-FORUM

Alexandria, Va. 22314

Libertarian Review

July-August 1976 — Vol.V, No. 4

As We Go Marching/America's Emerging Fascist Economy/ Toward a Planned Society

Reviewed by Walter E. Grinder

The Third Industrial Revolution

Reviewed by Jerry Pournelle

Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape

Reviewed by Myra Friedman

Defending the Undefendable

Reviewed by James Dale Davidson

ALSO: Susan Love Brown on "Living With Equals" / Reginald Bretnor's "Where Is Our Intellectual Middle Class?" / Regina Hugo on "Mind: An Essay on Human Feeling" / Steven Utley on Tom Waits / David Brudnoy's "On View" / Jeff Rigenbach's "Introduction to Imaginative Literature" / More!

